

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

RICHARD II.

ED. 1634, QUARTO 5.

INTRODUCTORY NOTICE.

As in the Rev. W. A. Harrison's Introduction to the Facsimiles of the earlier Qo. editions will be found a full account of this Play, a very brief notice is required of the edition here reproduced: it is thus described by the Cambridge Editors—

“The fifth Quarto (Q5) was printed from the second Folio (F2), but its readings sometimes agree with one or other of the earlier Quartos, and in a few cases are entirely independent of previous editions.”

Those who have examined its text by the aid of the foot-notes of the Cambridge Edition will readily admit the accuracy of this description; but lest the statement of its containing readings entirely independent of previous editions should lead to the notion that it may—though passing to the press through the medium of the second Folio—have had some independent authority behind it, it is as well to say at once, that to a very great extent its independent readings manifest merely the independence of error, and that it gives very few variations or corrections indeed that might not have been made by an ordinarily intelligent reader.

Following the Cambridge Editors' collations, and with a few additions of my own, I have marked with a dagger [†] every line of the Facsimile in which is to be found a reading independent of, or perhaps it should rather be said differing from, the texts of the preceding Qo. and Fo. editions. The total number of lines thus marked amounts to 99, and of this number nearly half may be at once set down as containing palpable errors; of the remainder eleven have been admitted to the text of the Cambridge edition, and, though some of them are very slight, I give them all here—

- I. i. 3— Hereford] Herford the rest.
- I. iii. 35— Derby] Darbie Q1, 2; Darby Q3, 4; Derbie Ff.
- I. iv. 23— Our selfe, and Busky, Bagot here and Greene.] The Qq omit Bagot here and Greene; The Ff give the line—
Our selfe and Busky: heere Bagot and Greene.

- II. i. 67— Ah,] Ah Qq; Ah! F1; Ah! F2.
 II. ii. 113— the other] tother Q1, 2; tother Q3, 4; Th'other Ff.
 II. ii. 130— Whoso] Who so the rest.
 II. iii. 164— Bristol (Bristoll)] Bristow the rest.
 III. i. 25— imprese] impreese Q1, 2, 3; impreesse Q4, Ff.
 V. iii. 144— Vncle farewell, and Cosin too adieu :] The rest omit too.
 V. vi. 12— Enter Fitz-water] . . . Lord Fitzwaters Qq; . . . Fitzwaters Ff.
 V. vi. 17— Fitz-water] Fits. Q1, 2; Fits : Q3, 4; Fitz-waters Ff.

Some few other variations of Q5 have been received with favour by some editors: in the king's speech, I. i. 116, 117—

“ Were he our brother, nay, our kingdom's heir
 As he is but our father's brother's son,” etc.

The other Quartos have my for our in all three cases, the Folios only in the first and third. Theobald follows here the Q5, but deserts it where in the same speech, l. 121, it has “our upright soul” for the my of the other editions. But neither in this speech nor elsewhere in the play is there any uniform use of the plural or singular in the kings' speeches. In V. iii. 24, where the other editions have “what means our cousin,” etc. Q5 has my. In II. i. 294, where Northumberland speaks of “our sceptre's gilt”, Q5 has the, a preferable reading, in my opinion.

Theobald also adopts the Q5 in III. iv. 94—“And am I last that know it?” The other editions have knows.

Capell too in V. ii. 71 adopts the contraction of Q5—“let me see't, I say.” The other editions have see it.

I have not attempted to collate Q5 with any modern texts, and the few instances cited above are only such as have casually attracted my attention; probably other instances might be adduced of the influence of Q5 on our modern editions. These, however, suffice to show that though by no means an edition of authority the Q5 of Richard II. is yet of some value, and must secure for this Facsimile a welcome from all engaged in the recension of Shakespeare's text.

The caret [<] in the margins of the Facsimile marks the places where the Qo., following F2, omits lines found in the preceding Quartos.

The Life and Death of King Richard the second.

Actus Primus, Scæna Prima.

Enter King Richard, John a Gaunt, with other Nobles, and Attendants.

King Richard

Ld John of Gaunt, time-honoured Lancaster,
Hast thou according to thy oath and band,
Brought hither Henry Hereford, thy bold son?
Here to make good, the boysterous late appeale
Which then our leasure would not let vs heare,
Against the Duke of Norfolke, Thomas Mowbray?

Gaunt. I haue my Liege.

King. Tell me moreover, hast thou sounded him,
If he appeale the Duke on ancient malice,
Or worthily as a good subiect should,
On some knowne ground of treachery in him.

Gaunt. As neere as I could sift him on that argument,
On some apparant danger seene in him,
Aym'd at your highnesse, no inueterate malice.

King. Then call them to our presence face to face,
And frowning brow to brow, our selues will heare
Th' accuser, and the accused, freely speake;
High stomack'd are they both, and full of ire
In rage, deafe as the sea; hasty as fire.

*The Life and DeathEnter Bullingbrooke, and Mowbray.*20 Bul. Many yeeres of happy dayes befall

My gracious Sovereigne, my loving Liege.

Mow. Each day still better others happinesse,

Vntill the heavens enuying earths good hap,

24 Adde an immortall title to your Crowne.

King. We thanke you both, yet one but flatters vs,

As well appeareth by the cause you come,

Namely to appeale each other of high treason.

28 Cofin of Hereford, what dost thou objectAgainst the Duke of Norfolke, Thomas Mowbray?Bul. First, (heaven be the record of my speech,))

In the devotion of a subjects love,

32 Tendring the precious safety of my Prince,

And free from other mis-begotten hate,

† Come I appelant to his Princely presence.

Now Thomas Mowbray, doe I turne to thee,

36 And marke my greeting well: for what I speake,

My body shall make good upon this earth,

Or my divine Soule answer it in Heaven.

Thou art a Traytor, and a miscreant ;

40 Too good to be so, and too bad to live,

Since the more faire and Christall is the Skie,

The uglier seemes the Clouds, that in it flye:

Once more, the more to aggravate the note,

44 With a foule traitors name, stusse I thy throat,

And wish (so please my Sovereigne) ere I move,

What my tongue speakes, my right drawne sword may prove.

48 Mow. Let not my coole words here accuse my zeale

'Tis not the tryall of a womans warre,

The bitter clamour of two eager tongues,

Can arbitrate this cause betwixt us twaine:

The blood is hot that must be cool'd for this,

52 Yet can I not of such tame patience boast,

As to be hush, and nought at all to say.

First, the faire reverence of your Highnesse curbes me,

From giving reines and spurs to my free speech,

† 56 Which once would post, untill it had recurr'd

These

I.i.

These termes of treason, doubly downe his throat.
 Setting aside his high bloods royalty,
 And let him be no kinsman to my Liege,
 I doe defie him, and I spit at him,
 Call him a slanderous Coward, and a Villaine:
 Which to maintaine, I would allow him oddes,
 And meet him, were I tide to runne a foote,
 Even to the frozen ridges of the Alpes,
 Or any other ground inhabitable,
 Where ever English man durst set his foote.
 Meane time, let this defend my royalty,
 By all my hopes most falsely doth he lye.

68

Bul. Pale trembling Coward, there I throw my gage,
 Disclaiming here the kindred of the King,
 And lay aside my high bloods royalty,
 Which feare, not reverence makes me to except,
 If guilty dread have left thee so much strength,
 As to take up mine honours pawne, then stoope,
 By that, and all the rights of Knighthood else,
 Will I make good against thee arme to arme,
 What I have spoken, or thou canst devise.

76

Mon. I take it up, and by that sword I sweare,
 Which gently layd my Knighthood on my shoulder,
 Ile answer thee in any faire degree,
 Or Chivalrous designe of Knightly tryall:
 And when I mount, alive may I not light,
 If I be traytor, or unjustly fight.

King. What doth our Cosin lay to Monbrayes charge?
 It must be great that can inherite us,
 So much as of a thought of ill in him.

Bul. Looke what I sayd my life shall prove it true,
 That Monbray hath receiv'd eight thousand Nobles,
 In name of lendings for your highnesse Souldiers,
 The which he hath detain'd for lewd employments,
 Like a false Traytor, and iniurious Villaine.
 Besides I say, and will in battell prove,
 Or here or elsewhere to the furthest Verge
 That ever was survey'd by English eye,

The Life and Death

96

That all the treasons of these eightheene yeares
 Complotted and contrived in this Land,
 Fetcht from false Mowbray their first head and spring.
 Further I say and further will maintaine
 Vpon his bad life, to make all this good,
 100 That he did plot the Duke of Glosters death,
 Suggest his soone beleeving adversaries,
 And consequently like a Traytor Coward,
 Sluc'd out his innocent soule through fireames of blood:
 104 Which blood, like sacrificing Abels cryes,
 (Even from the tonguelesse cavernes of the earth)
 To me for Iustice, and rough chastisement:
 And by the glorious worth of my descent,
 108 This arme shall doe it, or this life be spent

King. How high a pitch his resolution soares;
Thomas of Norfolk, what sayest thou to this?

Mow. Oh let my soveraigne turne away his face,
 And bid his eares a little while be deafe,
 Till I have told this slander of his blood,
 How God and good men hate so fowle a lyer.

King. Mowbray, impartiall are our eyes and eares,
 Were he our brother, nay, our Kingdomes heire,
 As he is but our fathers brothers sonne;
 Now by my Scepters awe, I make a vow,
 Such neighbour-neerenesse to our sacred blood,
 120 Should nothing priviledge him, nor partialize
 The unstooping firmenesse of our upright soule.
 He is our subiect (Mowbray) so art thou,
 Free speech and fearelesse, I to thee allow.

Mow. Then Bullingbrooke as low as to thy heart,
 Through the false passage of thy throat; thou lyest:
 Three parts of that receipt I had for Callice,
 Disburst I to his Highnesse souldiers:
 128 The other part reserv'd I by consent,
 For that my soveraigne Liege was in my debt,
 Vpon remainder of a deare account,
 Since last I went to France to fetch his Queene:
 132 Now swallow downe that lye-For Glosters death,

of Richard the second.

Li.

I flew him not ; but (to mine owne disgrace)
 Neglected my sworne duty in that case :
 For you my Noble Lord of Lancaster,
 The honourable father to my foe,
 Once I did lay an ambush for your life,
 A trespassse that doth vex my grieved soule:
 But ere I last receiv'd the Sacrament,
 I did confesse it, and exactly begg'd
 Your Graces pardon, and I hope I had it.
 This is my fault: as for the rest appeal'd,
 It issues from the rancour of a villaine,
 A recreant, and most degenerate Traytor,
 Which in my selfe I boldly will defend,
 And enterchangeably hurle downe my gage,
 Vpon this overweening Traitors foot,
 To prove my selfe a loyall Gentleman,
 Even in the best blood chamber'd in his bosome.
 In haste whereof most heartily I pray
 Your Highnesse to assigne our tryall day.
King. Wrath kindled Genlemen be rul'd by me:
 Let's purge this choller without letting blood:
 This we prescribe, though no Physition.
 Deepe malice makes too deepe incision.
 Forget, forgive, conclude, and be agreed,
 Our Doctors say, this is no time to bleed.
 Good Vncle, let this end where it begun,
 Wee'l calme the Duke of Norfolke, you your sonne.
Gaunt. To be a make-peace shall become my age,
 Throw downe (my sonne) the Duke of Norfolkes gage.
King. And Norfolke, throw downe his.
Gaunt. When Harry when? Obedience bids,
 Obedience bids, I should not bid agen.
King. Norfolke, throw downe, we bid; there is no boote.
Mow. My selfe I throw (dread Soveraigne) at thy foot.
 My life thou shalt command, but not my shame,
 The one my duty owes, but my faire name
 Despight of death that lives upon my grave
 To darke dishonours use, thou shalt not have.

The Life and Death

I am disgrac'd, impeach'd, and baffel'd here,
 Pierc'd to the soule with slanders venom'd speare:
 The which no Balme can cure, but his heart blood
 Which breath'd this poyson.

King. Rage must be withstood :

Give me his gage: Lyons make Leopards tame.

Mow. Yea, but not change his spots: take but my shame,

And I resigne my gage. My deare, deare Lord,
 The purest treasure mortall times afford,

Is spotlesse reputation : that away,
 Men are but gilded loame, or painted clay.

A jewell in a ten-times barr'd up Chest,

Is a bold spirit in a loyall brest.

Mine honour is my life ; both grow in one :

Take honour from me, and my life is done.

Then (deare my Liege) mine honour let me try,
 In that I live, and for that will I dye.

King. Cofin throw downe your gage,
 Doe you begin.

But. Oh heaven defend my soule from such foule sinne,

Shall I seeme Crest-falne in my fathers sight,

Or with pale beggar-fear impeach my height.

Before this out-dar'd dastard? Ere my tongue,

Shall wound mine honour with such feeble wrong ;

Or sound so base a parle : my teeth shall teare

The slavish motive of recanting feare,

And spit it bleeding in this high disgrace,

Where shame doth harbour, even in Mowbrayes face.

Exit Gaunt.

King. We were not borne to sue, but to command,

Which since we cannot doe to make you friends,

Be ready, (as your lives shall answer it)

At Coventree, upon Saint Lamberts day ;

There shall your Swords and Lances arbitrate

The swelling difference of your fetled hate :

Since we cannot atone you, you shall see

Iustice desigue the Victors Chivalry.

Lord Marshall, command our Officers at Armes,

Enter Gaunt, and Desebess of Glocester.

Gaunt. Alas, the part I had in Glosters blood,
Doth more solícite me than your exclames,
To stirre against the butchers of his life.
But since correction lyeth in those hands
Which made the fault that we cannot correct,
Put we our quarrell to the will of Heauen,
Who when they see the houres ripe on earth,
Will raigne hot vengeance on offenders heads.

Dus. Finds brotherhood in thee no sharper spurre?
Hath love in thy old blood no liuing fire?

Edwards seven tonnes (whereof thy selfe art one)
Where are seven vialles of his sacred blood.

Or seven faire branches springing from one roote:

Some of those seven are dryed by natures course,

Some of those branches by the destinies cut:

But Thomas, my deare Lord, my life, my Gloster,

One Viall full of Edwards sacred blood,

One flourishing branch of his most Royall roote

Is crack'd, and all the precious liquor spilt;

Is hackt downe, and his summerleaves all vaded

By Enuies hand, and Murders bloody Axe.

Ah Gaunt? His blood was thine, that bed, that wombe,

That mettall, that selfe-mould that fashíon'd thee,

Made him a man: and though thou liu'st and breath'st;

Yet art thou slaine in him: thou doest consent

In some large measure to thy Fathers death,

In that thou seest thy wretched brother dy,

Who was the modell of thy Fathers life,

Call it not patience (Gaunt) it is despaire,

In suffering thus thy brother to be slaughter'd

Lii.The Life and Death

Thou shew'st the naked pathway to thy life,
 Teaching sterne murther how to butcher thee:
 That which in meane men we intitle patience
 Is pale cold cowardise in noble breasts :
 What shall I say, to safegard thine owne life,
 The best way is to venge my Glossers death.

Gaunt. Heavens is the quarrell : for Heavens substitute
 His Deputy annoynted in his fight,
 Hath caus'd his death ; the which if wrongfully
 Let heaven revenge : for I may neuer lift
 An angry arme against his Minister.

Dut. Where then (alas) may I complaine my selfe?

Gau. To heaven the widdowes Champion to defence.

Dut. Why then I will : farewell old Gaunt.

Thou go'st to Coventry, there to behold
 Our Cosin Hereford, and fell Mowbray fight:
 O sit my husbands wrongs on Herefords speare,
 That it may enter butcher Mowbrayes breast :
 Or if misfortune misse the first carriere,
 Be Mowbrayes sinnes so heavy in his bosome,
 That they may breake his foaming coursers backe,
 And throw the Rider headlong in the Lists,
 A Caytiff recreant to my Cosin Hereford.
 Farewell old Gaunt, thy sometimes brothers wife
 With her companion Greefe, must end her life.

Gau. Sister fare well ; I must to Couentry,
 As much good stay with thee, as go with me.

Dut. Yet one word more Greefe, boundeth where it
 Not with the empty hollownesse, but weight. (falls,
 I take my leaue before I haue begun,
 For sorrow ends not : when it seemeth done.
 Commend me to my brother Edward Torke.

Loe, this is all : nay yet depart. not so,
 Though this be all, do not so quickly goe,
 I shall remember more. Bid him, Oh, what ?
 With all good speed at Pleshie visite me.

Alacke, and what shall good old Torke there see
 But empty lodgings, and unfurnish'd walles,

of Richard the second.

Lii.

Vn-peopl'd Offices, untroden stones?
And what heare there for welcome, but my groanes?
Therefore commend me, let him not come there,
To seeke out sorrow, that dwels every where:
Desolate, desolate will I hence and dye,
The last leave of thee, takes my weeping eye. Exeunt.

Scæna Tertia.

Liii.

Enter Marshall, and Aumerle.

Mar. My L. Aumerle, is Harry Hereford arriv'd?

Aum. Yea, at all poynts, and longs to enter in,

Mar. The Duke of Norfolk, sprightly and bold,
Stayes but the summons of the Appellants Trumpet.

Au. Why then the Champions, are prepar'd, and stay
For nothing but his Maiesties approach.

Flourish.

Enter King, Gaunt, Bushy, Bagot, Greene, and others: Then Mowbray in Armor, and Harrold.

Rich. Marshall, demand of yonder Champion
The cause of his arrivall here in Armes,
Aske him his name, and orderly proceed
To sweare him in the justice of his cause.

Mar. In Gods Name, and the Kings, say who thou art,
And why thou com'st, thus Knightly clad in Armes?
Against what man thou com'st, and what's thy quarrell,
Speake truly, on thy Knighthood, and thine oath,
As so defend thee heaven, and thy valour.

Mow. My name is Tho. Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk,
Who hither come engaged by my oath
(Which heaven defend a Knight should violate)
Both to defend my loyalty and truth,
To God, my King, and his succeeding issue,
Against the Duke of Hereford, that appeales me.

The Life and Death

And by the grace of God and this mine arme,
 To proue him (in defending of my selfe)
 A traytor to my God, my King, and me,
 And as I truely fight, defend me heaven.

Tucket. Enter Hereford, and Harold.

Rich. Marshall: aske yonder Knight in Armes,
 Both who he is, and why he commeth hither,
 Thus placed in habiliments of warre:
 And formally according to our Law
 Depose him in the iustice of his cause.

Mar. What is thy name, and wherefore com'st thou hi- (ther
 Before King Richard in his Royall Lists?
 Against whom com'st thou? and what's thy quarrell?
 Speake like a true Knight, so defend thee Heaven.

Bul. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby,
 Am I: who ready here doe stand in Armes,
 To prove by heavens grace, and my bodies valour,
 In Lists, on Thomas Mowbray Duke of Norfolke,
 That he's a Traytor foule and dangerous,
 To God of heaven, King Richard, and to me,
 And as I truely fight, defend me heaven.

Mar. On paine of death, no person be so bold,
 Or daring hardy as to touch the Lists,
 Except the Marshall, and such Officers
 Appoynted to direct these faire designs.

Bul. Lord Marshall, let me kisse my Soueraignes hand,
 And bow my knee before his Maiesty:
 For Mowbray and my selfe are like two men,
 That vow a long and weary pilgrimage,
 Then let vs take a ceremonious leaue
 And loving farewell of our severall friends.

Mar. The Appealant in all duty greets your Highnes,
 And craves to kisse your hand, and take his leave.

Rich. We will descend, and sold him in our armes.
 Cousin of Hereford as thy cause is iust,
 So be thy fortune in this royall fight:
 Farewell, my blood, which if to day thou shead,

Lament

of Richard the second.

I.iii.

Lament we may, but not reuenge thee dead.

Bul. Oh let no Noble eye prophane a teare
For me, if I be goar'd with Mowbrayes speare:
As confident, as is the Falcons flight
Against a Bird, doe I with Mowbray fight.
My loving Lord, I take my leave of you,
Of you (my Noble Cofin) Lord Aumerle;
Not sicke, although I haue to doe with death,
But lusty, young, and chearely drawing breath.
Loe, as at English Feasts, so I regret
The daintiest last, to make the end most sweet.
Oh thou the earthy author of my blood,
Whose youthfull spirit in me regenerate,
Doth with a two-fold vigor lift me up
To reach at victory above my head,
Adde prooffe unto mine Armour with thy prayers,
And with thy blessings steele my Lances-poynt,
That it may enter Mowbrayes waxen Coate,
And furbish new the name of John a Gaunt,
Even in the lusty haviour of his sonne.

Gaunt. Heaven in thy good cause make thee prosp'rous,
Be swift like lightning in the execution,
And let thy blowes doubly redoubled,
Fall like amazing thunder on the Caske
Of thy amaz'd pernicious enemy.

Rouze up thy youthfull blood, be valiant and live.

Bul. Mine innocence, and S. George to thrive.

Mow. How ever Heaven or fortune cast my lot,
There lives, or dyes, true to King Richards Throne,
Aloyall, iust, and upright Gentleman:
Never did Captive with a freer heart,
Cast off his chaines of bondage, and embrace
His golden uncontroul'd enfranchisement,
More than my dancing soule doth celebrate
This Feast of Battle, with mine adversary.
Most mighty Liege, and my companion Peeres,
Take from my mouth, the wish of happy yeares,
As gentle, and as iocund, as to jest,

l.iii.The Life and Death

96

Goe I to fight : Truth, hath a quiet breast.

Rich. Farewell, my Lord, securely I espie
Vertue with valour, couched in thine eye :
Order the tryall Marshall, and begin.

Mar. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby
Receive thy Lance, and heaven defend thy right.

Bul. Strong as a Towre in hope, I cry; Amen.

104

Mar. Goe beare this Lance to Thomas D. of Norfolke,

1 Har. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby,
Stands here for God, his Sovereigne, and himselte;
On paine to be found false and recreant,
To prove the Duke of Norfolke, Thomas Mowbray,
A Traytor to his God, his King, and him,
And dares him to set forwards to the fight.

2 Har. Here standeth Tho. Mowbray Duke of Norfolke

112

On paine to be found false and recreant,
Both to defend himselte, and to approve
Henry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby,
To God, his Sovereigne, and to him disloyall:
Couragiously, and with a free desire,
Attending but the signall to begin. A charge sounded.

116

Mar. Sound Trumpets, and let forward Combatants.
Stay, the King hath throwne his Warder downe.

Rich. Let them lay by their Helmets and their Spears,
And both returne backe to their Chaires againe:
Withdraw with us, and let the Trumpets sound,
While we returne these Dukes, what we decree,

A long flourish.

Draw neere and list

What with our counsell we have done.

For that our Kingdomes earth should not be soyl'd
With that deare blood which it hath fostered,
And for our eyes doe hate the dire aspect

128

Of civill wounds plough'd up with neyghbours swords,
Which so rous'd up with boystrous untun'd drummes,

With harsh resounding Trumpets dreadfull bray,
And grating shocke of wrathfull yron Armes,
Might from our quiet Confines fright faire Peace,

And

of Richard the second.

I.iii.

And make us wade even in our kindreds blood:
Therefore, we banish you our Territories.
You Cousin Hereford, upon paine of death,
Till twice five Summers have enrich'd our fields,
Shall not regret our faire Dominions,
But tread the stranger paths of banishment.

Bul. Your will be done: this must my comfort be,
That Sunne that warmes you here shall shine on me:
And those his golden beames to you here lent,
Shall poynt on me, and gilde my banishment.

Rich. Norfolk: for thee remains a heavier doome.
Which I with some unwillingnesse pronounce,
The slye slow houres shall not determinate
The datelesse limit of thy deare exile:
The hopelesse word, of never to returne,
Breathe against thee, upon paine of life.

Mow. A heavy sentence my most Soveraigne Liege,
And all unlook'd for from your Highnesse mouth:
A deerer merit, not so deepe a maim,
As to be cast forth in the common ayre
Have I deserved at your Highnesse hands.
The Language I have learn'd these forty yeares
(My native English) now I must forgoe,
And now my tongues use is to me no more,
Then an unstringed Vyoll, or a Harpe,
Or like a cunning Instrument cas'd up,
Or being open, put into his hands
That knowes no touch to tune the harmony.
Within my mouth you have engaol'd my tongue
Doubly purcullist with my teeth and lips,
And dull, unfeeling, barren ignorance,
Is made my gaoler to attend on me:
I am too old to fawne upon a Nurse,
To farre in yeares to be a pupill now:
What is thy sentence then, but speechlesse death,
Which robs my tongue from breatheing native breath?

Rich. It boots thee not to be compassionate,
After our sentence, plaining comes too late-

Mow. Then thus I turne me from my Countries light
To dwell in solemne shades of endlesse night.

178 Rich. Returne againe and take an oath with thee,
Lay on our royall Sword, your banisht hands,
Swear by the duty that you owe to heaven
(Our part therein we banish with your selves)
182 To keepe the Oath that we administer :
You never shall (so helpe you Truth and Heaven)
Embrace each others loue in banishment,
Nor ever looke upon each others face,
† 186 Nor ever writ, regreete, or reconcile
This lowring tempest of your home-bred hate,
Nor ever by aduised purpose meet,
To plot, contrive, or complot any ill,
190 Gainst Vs our State, our Subjects, or our Land,

Bul. I swear.

Mow. And I to keepe all this.

† 194 Bul. Norfolk, so farre, as to mine enemy,
By this time (had the King permitted us)
One of our soules had wandred in the ayre,
Banish'd this frayle sepulcher of our flesh,
As now our flesh is banish'd from this Land.
198 Confesse thy Treasons, ere thou stie this Realme,
Since thou hast farre to goe, beare not along
The clogging burthen of a guilty soule.

Mow. No Bullingbrooke: If ever I were Traitor,
202 My name be blotted from the Booke of Life,
And I from heaven banish'd, as from hence :
But what thou art, heaven, thou, and I doe know,
And all too soone (I feare) the King shall rue.
206 Farewell (my Liege) now no way can I stray,
Save backe to England, all the worlds my way.

Rich. Vncle, even in the glasses of thine eyes
I see thy grieved heart: thy sad aspect,
210 Hath from the number of his banish'd yeares
Pluck'd foure away: fixe frozen Winters spent,
Returne with welcome home from banishment.

Bul. How long a time lyes in one little word:

Four

of Richard the second.

I.iii.

Foure lagging Winters, and foure wanton Springs
End in a word, such is the breath of Kings.

Gaunt. I thanke my Liege, that in regard of me
He shortens foure yeares of my sonnes exile :
But little vantage shall I reape thereby.
For ere these fixe yeares that he hath to spend
Can change the Moones, and bring their times about,
My oyle-dride Lampe, and time-bewasted light
Shall be extinct with age, and endlesse night :
My inch of Taper, will be burnt, and done,
And blindfold death, not let me see my sonne.

Rich. Why Vncle, thou hast many yeares to live.

Gaunt. But not a minute (King) that thou canst give ;
Shorten my dayes thou canst with sudden sorrow,
And plucke nights from me, but not lend a morrow :
Thou canst helpe time to furrow me with age,
But stop no wrinkle in his pilgrimage :
Thy word is currant with him, for my death,
But dead, thy kingdome cannot buy my breath.

Rich. Thy sonne is banish'd upon good aduice
Whereto thy tongue a party-verdict gave,
Why at our Iustice seem'st thou then to lowre?

Gaunt. Things sweet to tast, prove in digestion sowre :
You urg'd me as a Iudge, but I had rather
You would have bid me argue like a Father.
Alas, I look'd when some of you should say,
I was too strict to make mine owne away :
But you gave leave to my unwilling tongue,
Against my will, to do my selfe this wrong.

Rich. Cofin farewell: and Vncle bid him so:
Six yeares we banish him, and he shall go.

Exit.

Flourish.

An. Cofin farewell; what preface must not know
From where you do remaine, let paper show.

Mar. My Lord, no leave take I, for I will ride
As farre as land will let me, by your side.

Gaunt. Oh to what purpose dost thou hord thy words,
That thou return'st no greeting to thy friends?

C

Bul.

Liii.The Life and Death

Bul. I have too few to take my leave of you,
When the tongues office should be prodigall,
To breath th' abundant dolour of the heart.

259 Gau. Thy griefe is but thy absence for a time.

Bul. Joy absent, griefe is present for that time.

Gau. What is sixe Winters, they are quickly gone?

Bul. To men in joy, but griefe makes one houre ten.

262 Gau. Call it a travell, that thou takest for pleasure.

Bul. My heart will sigh, when I miscall it so,
Which finds it an inforced Pilgrimage.

Gaus. The fullen passage of thy weary steps Esteeme a soyle, wherein thou art to let
The precious lewell of thy home returne.

267 Bul. Oh who can hold a fire in his hand

294 By thinking on the frosty Caucasus?

Or cloy the hungry edge of appetite,
By bare imagination of a feast?

298 Or wallow naked in December snow

By thinking on phantasticke Summers heate?
Oh no, the apprehension of the good

Gives but the greater feeling to the worse:

302 Fell sorrowes tooth, doth ever rankle more

Then when it bites, but lanceth not the sore.

Gau. Come, come (my sonne) Ile bring thee on thy way
Had I thy youth, and cause, I would not stay.

306 Bul. Then Englands ground farewell; sweet soyle adieu,

My Mother, and my Nurse, which beares me yet:

Where ere I wander, boast of this I can,
Though banish'd, yet a true-borne Englishman.

Liv.Scena Quarta.

Enter King, Aumerle, Greene, and Bagot.

Rich. We did observe. Coffin Aumerle,
How farre brought you high Hereford on his way.

Ann.

of Richard the second.

Liv.

Ann. I brought high Hereford (if you call him so)
But to the next high way, and there I left him.

Rich. And say, what store of parting teares were shed?

Ann. Faith none by me: except the Northeast wind
Which then blew bitterly against our face,
Awak'd the sleepey rheume, and so by chance
Did grace our hollow parting with a teare.

Rich. What said our Cosin when you parted with him?

An. Farewell: & for my heart disdain'd that my tongue
Should so prophane the word, that taught me craft
To counterfeite oppression of such grieve,
That word seem'd buried in my sorrowes grave.
Marry, would the word farewell, had lengthen'd houres,
And added yeeres to his short banishment,
He should have had a volume of Farewells,
But since it would not, he had none of me.

Rich. He is our Cosin (Cosin) but 'tis doubt,
When time shall call him home from banishment,
Whether our kinsman come to see his friends,
Our selfe, and Bashy, Bagot here and Greene
Observ'd his Courtship to the common people:
How he did seeme to dive into their hearts,
With humble, and familiar courtesie,
What reverence he did throw away on slaves;
Wooing poore Craftsmen, with the craft of smiles,
And patient under-bearing of his Fortune,
As 'twere to banish their affects with him.
Off goes his bonnet to an Oyfter-wench,
A brace of Dray-men bid God speed him well,
And had the tribute of his supple knee,
With thanks my Countermen, my Loving friends,
As were our England in reuerfion his,
And he our subjects next degree in hope.

Gr. VVell, he is gone, and with him goe these thoughts
Now for the Rebels, which stand out in Ireland,
Expedient mannage must be made my Liege
Ere further leysure, yeeld the further meanes
For their aduantage, and your highnesse losse.

Liv.The Life and Death

Rich. We will our selfe in person to this warre,
 And for our Coffers, with too great a Court,
 And liberall Largesse, are growne somewhat light,
 We are enforc'd to farme our royall Realme,
 The renew whereof shall furnish us
 For our affaires in hand : if they come short.
 Our substitutes at home shall have Blancke-charters :
 Whereto, when they shall know what men are rich,
 They shall subscribe them for large summes of Gold,
 And send them after to supply our wants :
 For we will make for Ireland presently.

Enter Busby.

Busby, what newes ?

Bu. Old Iohn a Gaunt is very sicke my Lord,
 Sodainely taken, and hath sent post haste
 To entreat your Maiesty to visite him.

Rich. Where lyes he ?

Bu. At Ely-houise.

Rich. Now put it (heaven) in his Physitians mind,
 To helpe him to his grave immediately :
 The liming of his coffers shall make Coates
 To decke our Souldiers for these Irish warres.
 Come Gentlemen, let's all go visit him :
 Pray heaven we may make haste, and come too late, Exit.

II.Actus Secundus, Scæna Prima.

Enter Gaunt feke, with the Duke of Torke.

Gau. Will the King come, that I may breath my last
 In wholsome counsell to his unstayd youth ?

Ter. Vex not your selfe, nor strive not with your breath
 For all in vaine comes counsell to his eare

Gau. Oh but (they say) the tongues of dying men
 Inforce attention, like deepe harmony;

Where

of Richard the second.

II.i.

Where words are scarce, they are seldome spent in vaine,
 For they breath truth, that breath their words in paine.
 He that no more must say, is listen'd more
 Then they whom youth and ease have taught to glose,
 More are mens ends mark'd, then their lives before,
 The setting Sunne, and musicke is the close
 As the last taste of sweetes, is sweetest last,
 Writ in remembrance, more then things long past :
 Though Richard my lives counsell would not heare,
 My deaths sad tale, may yet un-deafe his eare.

For. No, it is stop't with other flatt'ring sounds
 As prayes of his state: then there are found
 Lacivious Meeters, to whose venome sound
 The open eares of youth doth alwaies listen-
 Report of fashions in proud Italy,
 Whose manners still our tardy apish Nation
 Limpes after in base imitation.

Where doth the world thrust forth a vanity,
 So it be new, there's no respect how vile,
 That is not quickly buzz'd into their eares ?
 That all too late comes counsell to be heard,
 Where will doth mutiny with wits regard :
 Direct not him, whose way him selfe will chose,
 Tis breath thou lackst, and that breath wilt thou loose

Gaunt. Me thinkes I am a Prophet new inspir'd,
 And thus expiring doe foretell of him,
 His rash fierce blaze of Ryot cannot last,
 For violent fires soone burne out themselues ;
 Small shoures last long, but sodaine stormes are short,
 He tyres betimes, that spurs too fast betimes ;
 With eager feeding food doth choake the feeder ;
 Light vanity, insatiate cormorant,
 Consuming meanes soone preyes upon it selfe.
 This royall Throne of Kings, this Sceptred Isle,
 This earth of Majesty, this seate of Mars,
 This other Eden, demy Paradise,
 This Fortres built by nature for her selfe,
 Against infection, and the hand of warre:

II.The Life and Death

This happy breed of men, this little world,
 This precious stone set in the silver Sea,
 VVhich serves it in the office of a wall,
 48 Or as a Moate defensue to a house,
 Against the enuy of lesse happier Lands,
 This blessed plot, this Earth this Realme, this England,
 This Nurse, this teeming wombe of Royall Kings,
 52 Fear'd by their breed, and famous for their birth,
 Renowned for their deeds, as farre from home,
 For Christian service and true Chivalry,
 As is the Sepulcher in stubborne Iury
 56 Of the worlds ransome, blessed Maries sonne.
 This Land of such deare soules, this deare deare Land,
 Deare for her reputation through the world,
 Is now Leas'd out (I dye pronouncing it)
 60 Like to a Tenement, or pelting Farme.
 England bound in with the triumphant Sea,
 VVhose rocky shore beates backe the envious sledge
 Of watry Neptune, is now bound in with shame,
 64 VVith Inky blottes; and rotten Parchment bonds.
 That England that was wont to conquer others,
 Hath made a shamefull conquest of it selfe.
 † Ah, would the scandall vanish with my life,
 68 How happy then were my ensuing death?

Enter King, Queene, Annerle, Busby, Greene, Bager, Ros, and Willoughby.

Ter. The King is come, deale mildly with his youth,
 For young hot Coalts, being rag'd, doe rage the more.

Qu. How fares our noble Vncle, Launcester?

72 Ri. VVhat comfort man? How ist with aged Gaunt?

Ga. Oh how that name befits my composition:
 Old Gaunt indeed, and gaunt in being old:
 VVithin me griefe hath kept a tedious fast,
 76 And who abstaines from meate, that is not gaunt:
 For sleeping England long time have I watcht
 VVatching breeds leanness, leanness is all gaunt:
 The pleasure that some Fathers feed upon,

of Richard the second.

II.i.

Is my strik fast, I meane my Childrens lookes,
And therein fasting, hast thou made me gaunt :
Gaunt am I for the grave, gaunt as a grave,
VVhose hollow wombe inherits nought but bones.

Rich. Can sicke men play so nicely with their names ?

Gau. No, misery makes sport to mocke it selfe :
Since thou dost seeke to kill my name in me,
I mocke my name (great King) to flatter thee.

Rich. Should dying men flatter those that live ?

Gau. No, no, man living flatter those that dye.

Rich. Thou now a dying, sayst thou flatter'st me.

Gau. O no, thou dyest, though I the sicker be.

Rich. I am in health I breathe, I see thee ill.

Gau. Now he that made me, knowes I see thee ill :

Ill in my selfe to see, and in thee, seeing ill,
Thy death-bed is no lesser then the Land,
VVherein thou lyest in reputation sicke,
And thou too carelesse patient as thou art.
Commit'th thy annoynted body to the cure
Of those Physitions, that first wounded thee :
A thousand flatterers sit within thy Crowne,
VVhose compasse is no bigger then thy hand,
And yet engaged in so small a Verge,
The waste is no whit lesser then thy Land,
Oh had thy Grandfir with a Prophets eye,
Secne how his sonnes sonne, should destroy his sonne,
From forth thy reach he would have layd thy shame,
Deposing thee before thou wert posselt,
VVhich art posselt now to depose thy selfe,
Why (Cofin) were thou Regent of the world,
It were a shame to let this Land by lease:
But for thy world enioying but this Land,
Is it not more then shame, to shame it so ?
Landlord of England art thou, and not King:
Thy state of Law, is bondslave to the Law,
And _____

Rich. And thou, a lunatieke leane-witted foole,
Presuming on an Agues priviledge.

Dar'ſt with thy frozen admonition
 Make pale our cheekes, chaſing the Royall blood
 With fury, from his native reſidence?
 Now by my Seates right Royall Maieſty,
 Wert thou not brother to great Edwards ſonne,
 This tongue that runnes ſo roundly in thy head,
 Should runne thy head from thy unreuerent ſhoulders.

Gau. Oh ſpare me not, my brother Edwards ſonne,
 For that I was his father Edwards ſonne:
 That blood already (like the Pellican)
 Thou haſt tapt out, and drunkenly carows'd.
 My brother Gloceſter, plaine well meaning ſoule,
 (Whom faire befall in heaven 'mongſt happy ſoules)
 May be a preſident, and witneſſe good,

 Ioyne with the preſent ſickeneſſe that I haue,

 Live in thy ſhame, but dye not ſhame with thee,
 Theſe words hereafter, thy tormentors be.
 Convey me to my bed, then to my grave.
 Love they to live, that love and honour have. Exit.

 For both haſt thou, and both become the grave.
Ter. I doe beſeech your Maieſty impute his words

Yor. Be Yorke the next, that must be bankrupt so,
Though death be poore, it ends a mortall wo.

Rich. The ripest fruit first falls, and so doth he,
His time is spent, our pilgrimage must be :
So much for that. Now for our Irish warres,
We must supplant those rough rug-headed Kernes,
Which live like venom, where no venom else
But onely they have priviledge to live.
And for these great affaires do aske some charge
Towards our assistance, we doe seize to us
The plate, coyne, and revenews, and moveables,
Whereof our Vncle Gaunt did stand posselt,

Yor. How long shall I be patient ? Oh how long
Shall tender duty make me suffer wrong ?
Not Glosters death, nor Herefords banishment,
Nor Gaunts rebukes, nor Englands private wrongs,
Nor the prevention of poore Bullingbrooke,
About his marriage, nor my owne disgrace
Have ever made me sowre my patient cheeke,
Or bend one wrinkle on my soveraignes face :
I am the last of noble Edwards sonnes,
Of whom thy father Prince of Wales was first :
In warres was never Lyon rag'd more fierce :
In peace, was never gentle Lambe more mild,
Then was that young and Princely Gentleman :
His face thou hast, for even so look'd he
Accomplish'd with the number of thy howers :
But when he frown'd, it was against the French,
And not against his friends : his noble hand
Did win what he did spend : and spent not that
Which his triumphant fathers hand had won :
His hands were guilty of no kindreds blood,
But bloody with the enemies of his kinne :

I pleas'd not to be pardon'd, am content with all:
 Seeke you to seize, and gripe into your hands
 The Royalties and Rightes of banish'd Hereford?
 Is not Gauw dead? and doth not Hereford live?

Was not Gauw just? and is not Harry true?
 Did not the one deserve to have an heyre?

Is not his heyre a well-deserving sonne?
 Take Hereford's rights away, and take from time
 His Charters, and his custom rie rights:

Let not to morrow then insue to day,
 Be not thy selfe. For how art thou a King
 But by faire sequence and succession?

204

Now afore God, God forbid I say true,
 If you doe wrongfully seize Hereford's right,
 Call in his Letters Patents that he hath
 By his Atturneyes generall, to sue
 His Livery, and deny his offer'd homage,
 You plucke a thousand dangers on your head,
 You loose a thousand well-disposed hearts,
 And prickte my tender patience to those thoughts
 Which honor and allegiance cannot thinke.

208

Ric. Thinke what you will: we seise into our hands,
 His plate, his goods, his money, and his lands.

Tor. Ile not be by the while: My Leige farewell,
 What will ensue hereof, there's none can tell,
 But by bad cources may be understood.
 That their events can never fall out good.

Exit.

Rich. Goe Bushie to the Earle of Wiltshire streight,
 Bid him repaire to us to Ely House,
 To see this businesse: to morrow next
 We will for Ireland, and 'tis time, I trow:
 And we create in absence of our selfe
 Our Vnckle Torke, Lord Governer of England:
 For he is just, and alwayes lov'd us well.
 Come on our Queene, to morrow must we part,
 Be merry, for our time of stay is short.

Ross. And living too, for now his sonne is Duke.

Will. Barely in title, not in revennew.

Nor. Richly in both, if justice had her right.

Ross. My heart is great: but it must breake with silence
Eer't be disburthen'd with a liberrall tongue.

Nor. Nay speake thy mind & let him ne'r speake more
That speakes thy words againe to doe thee harme.

Wil. Tends that thou'dst speake to th' D. of Hereford?
If it be so, out with it boldly man:

Quicke is mine eare to heare of good towards him.

Ross. No good at all that I can doe for him,

Vnlesse you call it good to pity him,

Bereft and gelded of his patrimony.

Nor. Now afore heaven, 'ts shame such wrongs are borne,

In him a royall Prince, and many moe
Of noble blood in this declining Land;
The King is not himselfe, but basely led
By flatterers, and what they will informe
Meerely in hate 'gainst any of us all:

That will the King severely prosecute

'Gainst us, our lives, our children, and our heires.

Ross. The Commons hath he pill'd with grievous taxes
And quite lost their hearts: the Nobles hath he fin'd
For ancient quarrels, and quite lost their hearts.

Wil. And daily new exactions are devis'd,
As blankes, benevolences, and I wot not what:
But what o' Gods name doth become of this?

Nor. Warres hath not wasted it, for warr'd he hath not,
But basely yeelded upon comprimize,
That which his Ancestors atchieu'd with blowes:
More hath he spent in peace, then they in warres.

Ross. The Earle of Wiltshire hath the Realme in farme.

Wil. The King's growne bankrupt like a broken man.

Nor. Reproach, and desolation hangeth over him.

Ross. He hath not money for these Irish warres:
(His burthenous taxations notwithstanding)
But by the robbing of the banish'd Duke.

The Life and Death

Nor. His noble Kinsman, most degenerate King:
But Lords, we heare this fearefull tempest sing

264

Yet seeke no shelter to avoyd the storme:

We see the winde sit sore upon our sailes,

And yet we strike not, but securely perish.

268

Ref. We see the very wracke that we must suffer,

And unavoyded is the danger now

For suffering so the causes of our wracke.

Nor. Not so; even through the hollow eyes of death,

272

I spie life peercing: but I dare not say.

How neere the tidings of our comfort is.

Wil. Nay, let us share thy thoughts, as thou dost ours.

276

Ref. Be confident to speake Northumberland,

We three, are but thy selfe, and speaking so,

Thy words are but as thoughts, therefore be bold.

281

Nor. Then thus: I have from Port le Blan

A Bay in Britaine, receiv'd intelligence,

That Harry Duke of Hereford, Raynald Lord Cebham,

That late broke from the Duke of Exeter,

His brother Archbishop, late of Canterbury,

284

Sir Thomas Erpingham, Sir John Rainston,

Sir John Norbery, Sir Robert Waterton, and Francis Lupint,

All these well furnish'd by the Duke of Brittaine,

With eight tall ships, three thousand men of warre

288

Are making hither with all due expedience,

And shortly meane to touch our Northerne shore:

Perhaps they had ere this, but that they stay

The first departing of the King for Ireland.

† 292

If then we shall shake off our slavish yoke,

Impe out our drooping Countries broken wing,

Redeeme from broken pawne, the blemish'd Crowne,

Wipe off the dust that hides the Scepters gilt,

And make high Majesty looke like it selfe,

296

Away with me in poste to Ravenstpurgh,

But if you faint, as fearing to doe so,

Stay and be secret and my selfe will goe.

300

Ref. To horse, to horse, urge doubts to them that feare.

Wil. Hold out my horse, and I will first be there, Exen.

Scena

of Richard the second.

II.ii.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Queene, Busby, and Bagot.

Busb. Madam, your Majesty is too much sad,
You promis'd when you parted with the King,
To lay aside selfe-harming heavinesse,
And entertaine a cheerefull disposition.

Qu. To please the King, I did: to please my selfe
I cannot doe it: yet I know no cause
Why I should welcome such a guest as griefe,
Save bidding farewell to so sweet a guest
As my sweet Richard, yet againe me thinks
Some unborne sorrow ripe in fortunes wombe
Is comming towards me, and my inward soule
With nothing trembles, at something it grieves,
More than with parting from my Lord the King.

Busb. Each substance of a griefe had twenty shadows
Which shewes like griefe it selfe, but is not so:
For sorrowes eye glazed with blinding teares,
Divides one thing intire, to many objects
Like perspectives, which rightly gaz'd upon
Shew nothing but confusion, ey'd awry,
Distinguisht forme: so your sweet Maiesty
Looking awry upon your Lords departure,
Find shapes of griefe, more then himselfe to waile,
Which look'd on as it is, is nought but shadowes
Of what it is not, then thrice-gracious Queene,
More then your Lords departure weepe not, more's not
Or if it be, tis with false sorrowes eye, (scene;
Which for things true, weepe things imaginary.

Qu. It may be so, but yet my inward soule
Perswades me it is otherwise how ere it be,
I cannot but be sad: so heavy sad.

The Life and Death

As though onthinking on no thought I thinke,
Makes me with heavy nothing faint and shrinke.

Busb. 'Tis nothing but conceit (my gracious Lady.)

Qu. 'Tis nothing lesse : conceit is still deriu'd

From some fore father greefe, mine is not so,

For nothing hath begot my something grieffe,

Orsomething, hath the nothing that I grieve,

'Tis in reversion that I doe possesse,

But what it is, that is not yet knowne, what

I cannot name, 'tis namelesse woe I wot. Emer Green.

Gre. Heaven save your Majesty, and well met Gentle.

I hope the King is not yet shipt for Ireland. (men;

Qu. Why hop' st thou so? 'Tis better hope he is:

For his designs crave haste, good hope,

Then wherefore dost thou hope he is not shipt?

Gre. That he our hope, might have retyr'd his power,

And driven into despaire an enemies hope,

Who strongly hath set footing in this Land,

The banish'd Bullingbrooke repeales himselfe,

And with up-lifted Armes is safe arriu'd

At Rauensturg.

Qu. Now God in heaven forbid.

Gre. O Maddam 'tis too true: and that is worse,

The L. Northumberland, his young sonne, Henry Percy,

The Lords of Rosse, Beaumont, and Willoughby.

With all their powerfull friends are fled to him.

Busb. Why have you not proclaim'd Northumberland

And the rest of the revolted faction, Traytors?

Gre. We have : whereupon the Earle of Worcester

Hath broke his staffe, resign'd his Stewardship, (brook

And all the household seruantes fled with him to Bullen.

Qu. So Greene, thou art the Midwife of my woe,

And Bullingbrooke my sorrowes dismall heyre:

Now hath my soule brought forth her prodigy,

And I a gasping new delivered mother,

Haue woe to woe, sorrow to sorrow ioyn'd.

Busb. Despaire not Madam.

Qu. Who shall hinder me?

I will

of Richard the second.

II.ii.

I will despaire, and be at enmity
With couzening hope ; he is a flatterer,
A Parasite, a keeper backe of death,
Who gently would dissolve the bands of life,
Which false hopes linger in extremity.

Enter Yorke.

Gre. Here comes the Duke of Yorke.

Qu. With signes of warre about his aged necke,
Oh full of carefull businesse are his lookes:
Vncle, for heavens sake speake comfortable words.

Yor. Comfort's in Heaven, and we are on the earth.
Where nothing lives but crosse, care, and griefe :
Your husband he is gone to save farre off,
Whilst others come to make his loofe at home :
Here am I left to underprop his Land,
Who weake with age, cannot support my selfe :
Now comes his sicke houre that his surfeit made,
Now shall he try his friends that flattered him.

Enter a Servant.

Ser. My Lord, your sonne was gone before I came.

Yor. He was : why so, goe all which way it will :
The Nobles they are fled, the Commons they are cold,
And will I feare revolt on Herefords side.
Sirra, get thee to Plasby to my sister Gloster,
Bid her send me presently a thousand pound,
Hold, take my Ring.

Ser. My Lord, I had forgot
To tell your Lordship, to day I came by, and call'd there,
But I shall grieve you to report the rest.

Yor. What is't knave ?

Ser. An houre before I came, the Dutchesse di'de.

To. Heaven for his mercy, what a tide of woes
Come rushing on this wofull Land at once ?
I know not what to doe : I would to heaven
(So my vntruth hath not provok'd him to it)
The King had cut off my head with my brothers.
What, are there postes dispatcht for Ireland ?
How shall we doe for money for these warres ?

II.ii.The Life and Death

Come sifter (Cofin I would fay) pray pardon me.
Goe fellow, get thee home, provide fome Carts,
And bring away the Armour that is there.

Gentlemen, will you muster men?

If I know how, or which way to order thefe affaires
Thus disorderly thrust into my hands.

Never beleeeve me. Both are my kinsmen,
Th'one is my Sovereigne, whom both my oath
And duty bids defend: the other againe

116

Is my kinsman, whom the King hath wrong'd,
Whom conscience, and my kindred bids to right,
Well, somewhat we must doe: Come Cofin,
Ile dispose of you, Gentlemen, goe muster up your men,
And meet me presently at Barkley Castle:

I should to Plashy too, but time will not permit,
All is uneven, and every thing is left at six and seven. Ex.

Busb. The wind fits faire for newes to goe to Ireland,
But none returns: for us to levy power
Proportionable to th'enemy, is all impossible.

128

Gree. Besides our neereneffe to the King in love,
Is neere the hate of those love not the King.

Bag. And that's the wavering Commons, for their love
Lies in their purses, and whofe empties them,
By so much fills their hearts with deadly hate.

†132

Busb. Therein the King stands generally condemn'd.

Bag. If judgement lye in them, then so doe we,
Because we have beene ever neere the King.

Gree. Well: I will for refuge streight to Bristoll Castle,
The Earle of Wiltshire is already there.

Busb. Thither will I with you, for little office
Will the hatefull Commons performe for us,
Except like Curres, to teare us all in peeces:

140

Will you goe along with us?

Bag. No, I will to Ireland to his Maiesty:
Farewell, if hearts presages be not vaine,
We three here part, that nev'r shall meeete againe.

144

Busb. That's as Torke thrives to beate backe Bullinbrook.

Gr. Alas poore Duke, the taske he undertakes

of Richard the second.

Is numbring sands, and drinking Oceans dry,
Where one on his side fights, thousands will flye.

Bush. Farewell at once, for once, for all, and ever.
Well, we may meet againe.

Bag. I feare me never.

Exit.

Scæna Tertia.

Enter the Duke of Hereford, and Northumberland.

Bul. How farre is it my Lord to Barkley now?

Nor. Beleeve me noble Lord,

I am a stranger here in Gloustershire.

These high wide hills, and rough uneven wayes;
Drawes out our miles, and makes them wearysome:
And yet our faire discourses hath beene as Sugar,
Making the hard way sweet and delectable:

But I bethinke me, what a weary way
From Ravenspurgh to Cottshold will be found,
In Rosse and Willoughby, wanting your company
Which I protest hath very much beguild
The tediousnesse, and processe of my travell:
But theirs is sweetned with the hope to have
The present benefit that I possesse:
And hope to joy, is little lesse in joy,
Then hope enjoy'd: By this, the weary Lords
Shall make their way seeme short, as mine hath done,
By sight of what I have, your Noble company,

Bul. Of much lesse valedw is my company
Then your good words: but who comes here?

Percy. No, my good Lord, he hath forlooked the Court,
Broken his Staffe of Office, and disperst
28 The Household of the King.

Nor. What was his reason?

He was not so resolv'd, when we last spake together.

Percy. Because your Lordship was proclaimed Traytor.
But he, my Lord, is gone to Ravenspurgh,
32 To offer service to the Duke of Hereford,
And sent me over by Barkely, to discover
What power the Duke of Yorke had levied there,
Then with direction to repaire to Ravenspurgh.

Nor. Have you forgot the Duke of Hereford (Boy?)

Percy. No, my good Lord; for that is not forgot
Which ne're I did remember: to my knowledge,
I never in my life did looke on him.

40 Nor. Then learne to know him now: this is the Duke.

Percy. My gracious Lord, I tender you my service,
Such as it is, being tender, raw, and young,
Which elder dayes shall ripen, and confirme
44 To more approved service and desert.

But I thanke thee gentle Percy, and be sure
I count my selfe in nothing else so happy,
As in a soule remembring my good friends:

It shall be still thy true loves recompence,
My heart this covenant makes, my hand thus seales it.

Nor. How farre is it to Barkley? and what stirre
52 Keepest good old Torke there, with his men of warre?

Percy. There stands the Castle, by yond tuft of Trees,
Mann'd with three hundred men, as I have heard,
And in it are the Lords of Torke, Barkely, and Seymor,
56 None else of Name, and noble estimate.

Bloody

of Richard the second.

Bloody with spurring, fiery red with haft.

Bul. Welcome my Lords, I wot your love pursues
A banisht Traytor; all my Treasury
Is yet but unfelt thanks, which more enrich'd,
Shall be your love, and labours recompence.

Rof. Your presence makes vs rich, most Noble Lord.

Bul. Evermore thanks, th'Exchequer of the poore,
Which till my infant-fortune comes to yeares,
Stands for my bounty : but who comes here †

Enter Barkely.

Nor. It is my Lord of Barkely as I guesse.

Bark. My Lord of Hereford, my message is to you.

Bul. My Lord, my answer is to Launcester,
And I am come to seeke that name in England,
And I must find that Title in your Towne,
Before I make reply to ought you say.

Bark. Mistake me not, my Lord, 'tis not my meaning
To raze one title of your honour out.
To you, my Lord, I come (what Lord you will)
From the most glorious of this Land,
The Duke of Yorke, to know what pricks you on
To take advantage of the absent time,
And fright our native peace with selfe-borne Armes.

Enter Yorke.

Bul. I shall not need transport my words by you,
Here comes his Grace in person. My Noble Vncle.

Yor. Shew me thy humble Heart, and not thy Knee,
Whose duty is deceivable and false,

Bul. My gracious Vncle.

Yor. Tut, tut, Grace me no Grace, nor Vncle me,
I am no Traytors Vncle; and that word Grace,
In an ungracious mouth, is but prophane
Why have these banish'd, and forbidden Legges,
Dar'd once to touch the dust of Englands Ground?
But more then why, why have they dar'd to march
So many miles upon her peacefull Bosome,
Frighting her pale fac'd Villages with Warre,

You have a sonne, Aumerle, my Noble Kinsman,

Had you first died, and he bin thus trod downe,

He should have found his Vncle Gaunt a father,

I have had feeling of my Cosins wrongs,
And labour'd all I could to doe him right :
But in this kind, to come in braving Armes,
Be his owne Carver, and cut out his way,
To find out Right with wrongs, it may not be ;
And you that doe abeit him in this kind,
Cherish Rebellion, and are Rebels all.

But for his owne, and for the right of that,
We all have strongly sworne to give him ayd,
And let him nev'r see joy, that breaks that oath.

Capt. My Lord of Salisbury, we have stayd ten dayes,
And hardly kept our Countrymen together,
And yet we heare no tidings from the King:
Therefore we will disperse our selves: farewell.

Sal. Stay yet another day, thou trusty Welchman,
The King reposeth all his confidence in thee.

Capt. 'Tis thought the King is dead, we will not stay;
The Bay-trees in our Country all are wither'd,
The Meteors fright the fixed Starres of Heaven;
The pale-fac'd Moone looks bloody on the Earth,
And leane-lookt Prophets whisper fearefull change;
Rich men looke sad, and Ruffians dance and leape,
The one in feare, to lose what they enioy,
The other to enjoy by Rage, and Warre:
These signes fore-run the death of Kings.
Farewell, our Countrymen are gone and fled,
As well assur'd Richard their King is dead. Exit.

Sal. Ah Richard, with eyes of heauy mind,
I see thy Glory, like a shooting Starre,
Fall to the base Earth, from the Firmament:
Thy Sunne sets weeping in the lowly West.
Witnessing stormes to come, woe, and unrest:
Thy friends are fled, to waite upon thy foes,
And crossely to thy good, all fortune goes. Exit.

And what losse is it to be rid of Care?

Strives Bullingbrooke to be as great as we?
Greater he shall not be: If he serve God,
Wee'l serve him too; and be his Fellow so.
Revolt our subjects? That we cannot mend,
They breake their Faith to God as well as us:
Cry Woe, Destruction, Ruine, Losse, Decay,
The worst is Death, and death will have his day.

Scroope Glad am I, that your Highnesse is so arm'd
To beare the tidings of Calamity.
Like an unseasonable stormy day,
Which make the silver Rivers drowne their Shores,
As if the world were all dissolv'd to teares:
So high, above his Limits, swells the Rage
Of Bullingbrooke, covering your fearefull Land
With hard bright Steele, and hearts harder then Steele:
White Beares have arm'd their thin and hairelesse Scalps
Against thy Majesty, and boyes with womens voyces,
Strive to speake bigge, and clap their female joynts
In stiffe unwieldy Armes: against thy Crowne
Thy very Beadsmen learne to bend their bowes
Of double fatall Eugh: against thy state
Yea Distaffe-VVomen manage rusty Bills:
Against thy Seat both young and old rebell,
And all goes worse then I have power to tell.

Rich. Too well, too well thou tell'st a Tale so ill.
VVhere is the Earle of Wiltshire? where is Bagot?
VVhat is become of Bushy? where is Greene?
That they have let the dangerous Enemy
Measure our Confinnes with such peacefull steps?
If we prevaile, their hands shall pay for it.
I warrant they haue made peace with Bullingbrooke.

Scroope. Peace have they made with him indeede (my Lord.)

III.ii.

The Life and Death

Rich. Oh Villaines, Vipers, damn'd without redemption,
 Dogs, easily won to fawne on any man,
 Snakes in my heart blood warm'd, that sting my heart,
 Three Iudasses, each one thrice worse then Iudas,
 Would they make peace? terrible Hell make warre,
 Vpon their spotted soules for this Offence.

Scroope. Sweet love (I see) changing his property,
 Turnes to the sowrest, and most deadly hate:
 Againe uncurse their soules: their peace is made
 With Heads, and not with hands: those whom you curse
 Have felt the worst of deaths destroying hand,
 And lye full low, grav'd in the hollow ground.

Aum. Is Busby, Greene, and the Earle of Wiltshire dead

Scroope. Yea, all of them at Bristow lost their heads.

Aum. Where is the Duke my Father with his Power:

Rich. No matter where, of comfort no man speake:
 Let's talke of Graves, of Wormes, and Epitaphs,
 Make dust our Paper, and with Rainy Eyes
 Write sorrow in the bosome of the Earth.

Let's chuse Executors, and talke of Wills:
 And yet not so; for what can we bequeath,
 Save our deposed bodies to the ground?
 Our Lands, our lives, and all are Bullingbrookes,
 And nothing can we call our owne, but Death,
 And that small modell of the barren Earth,
 Which serves as paste, and cover to our bones:

For Heavens sake let us sit upon the ground,
 And tell sad stories of the death of Kings.
 How some have beene depos'd, some slaine in warre,
 Some haunted by the Ghosts they have depos'd,
 Some poyson'd by their Wives, some sleeping kill'd,
 All murder'd. For within the hollow Crowne
 That rounds the mortall temples of a King,
 Keepest Death his Court, and there the Antique sits
 Scoffing his state, and grinning at his pompe,
 Allowing him a breath, a little Scene,
 To Monarchize, be fear'd, and kill with lookes,
 Infusing him with selfe and vaine conceit,

As

of Richard the second.

III.ii.

As if this Flesh, which walls about our Life,
 VVere Brasse impregnable: and humor'd thus,
 Comes at the last, and with a little Pinne
 Boares through his Castle VValls, and farewell King
 Cover your heads, and mocke not flesh and, blood
 VVith solemne Reverence: throw away Respect,
 Tradition, forme, and Ceremonious duty,
 For you have but mistooke me all this while:
 I live with bread like you, feeble VVant,
 Taste Griefe, need Friends: subjected thus,
 How can you say to me, I am a King?

172

176

Carl. My Lord; wise men ne're waile their present woes,
 But presently prevent the wayes to waile:
 To feare the Foe, since feare oppresseth strength,
 Gives in your weakenesse, strength unto your Foe;
 Feare, and be slaine, no worse can come to fight,
 And fight and die, is death destroying death.

VVhere fearing dying, payes death servile breath.
Ann. My Father hath a Power, enquire of him,
 And learne to make a Body of a Limbe.

Rich. Thou chid'st me well; proud Bullingbrooke I come
 To change blowes with thee, for our day of Doome:
 This Ague-fit of feare is over-blowne,
 An easie taske it is to win our owne.
 Say Scroope, where lies our Vncle with his Power?

188

192

Scroope. Men iudge by the complexion of the skie
 The state and inclination of the day,
 So may you by my dull and heavy Eye:

196

My tongue hath but a heavier Tale to say:
 I play the torturer, by small and small
 To lengthen out the worst, that must be spoken,
 Your Vncle York is joyn'd with Bullingbrooke,
 And all your Northerne Castles yeilded up,
 And all your southerne Gentlemen in Armes
 Vpon his Faction.

200

Rich. Thou hast sayd enough.
 Beshrew thee Cousin, which didst lead me forth

204

III.ii.The Life and Death

Of that sweet way I was in, to dispaire :
 What say you now? what comfort have we now?
 By heaven Ile hate him everlastingly,
 208 That bids me be of comfort any more.
 Goe to Flint Castle, there Ile pine away,
 A King, Woes slave, shall Kingly Woe obey:
 That power I have, discharge, and let 'em goe
 212 To eare the Land, that hath some hope to grow
 For I have none. Let no man speake againe
 To alter this, for counsaile is but vaine.

Ann. My Liege, one word.

216 Rich. He does me double wrong,
 That wounds me with the flatteries of his tongue,
 Discharge my followers: let them hence away,
 From Richards Night, to Bullingbrookes faire Day. Exen.

III.iii.Scæna Tertia.

Enter with Drums and Colours, Bullingbrooke, Torke, Northumberland, Attendants.

Bul. So that by this intelligence we learne
 The Welchmen are dispers'd, and Salisbury
 Is gone to meete the King, who lately landed
 4 With some few private friends, upon this Coast.

Nor. The news is very faire and good my Lord,
Richard not farre from hence, hath hid his head.

8 Tor. It would befeeme the Lord Northumberland,
 To say King Richard: a lacke the heavy day,
 When such a sacred King should hide his head.

† Nor. Your Grace mistakes: onely to be brieft,
 Left I this Title out.

12 Tor. The time hath beene,
 Would you have beene so brieft with him, he would
 Have beene so brieft with you, to shorten you,
 For taking so the head; your whole heads length.

Bul.

of Richard the second.

III.iii.

Bul. Mistake not (Vncle) farther than you should.

Per. Take not (good Cousin) farther than you should,
Least you mistake, the heavens are ore your head.

Bul. I know it (Vncle) and oppose not my selfe
Against their will. But who comes here?

Enter Percy.

Welcome Harry: what, will not this Castle yeeld?

Per. The Castle royally is mann'd, my Lord,
Against thy entrance.

Bul. Royally? Why, it contaynes no King?

Per. Yes (my good Lord)

It doth containe a King: King Richard lyes
Within the limits of yond Lime and Stone,
And with him the Lord Aumerle, Lord Salisbury
Sir Stephen Scroope, besides a Cleargy man
Of holy reverence: who, I cannot learne.

Per. Oh, belike it is the Bishop of Carlile.

Bul. Noble Lord,

Goe to the rude Ribs of that ancient Castle,
Through Brazen Trumpet send the breath of Parle
Into his ruin'd Eares, and thus deliver:
Henry Bullingbrooke upon his knees doth kisse
King Richards hand, and sends allegiance
And true fayth of heart to his royall Person: hither come
Even at his feete, to lay my armes and power
Provided, that my Banishment repeald,
And Lands restor'd againe, be freely granted:
If not, ile use th'advantage of my power,
And lay the summers dust with showers of blood
Rayn'd from the wounds of slaughter'd Englishmen;
The which, how farre off from the mind of Bullingbrooke
It is, such Crimson Tempest should bedrench
The fresh Greene Lap of faire King Richards Land
My stooping duty tenderly shall shew.
Goe signifie as much, while here we march
Vpon the Grassie Carpet of this plaine
Let's march without the noyse of threatning Drum,
That from this Castels tatter'd Battlements

III.iii.The Life and Death

Our faire Appoyntments may be well perus'd
 Me thinkes King Richard and my selfe should meete.
 With no lesse terror then the Elements

58 Of Fire and Water, when their thundering smoake
 At meeting teares the cloudy cheekes of Heaven:

Be he the fire, Ile be the yeilding Water;
 The rage be his, while on the Earth I raine
 60 My Waters on the Earth, and not on him.

March on, and marke King Richard how he lookes.

*Parle without, and answer within: then a Flourish.
 Enter on the Walls, Richard, Carlile, Azmerle, Scroop, Salisbury.*

See, see, King Richard doth himselfe appeare
 As doth the blushing discontented Sunne,
 64 From out the fiery Portall of the East.

When he perceives the envious clouds are bent
 To dimme his glory, and to staine the tract
 Of his bright passage to the Occident.

68 Tor. Yet lookes he like a King: behold his Eye
 (As bright as is the Eagles) lightens forth
 Controlling Majesty: alacke, alacke, for woe,
 That any harme should staine so faire a show.

72 Rich. We are amaz'd, and thus long have we stood
 To watch the fearefull bending of thy Knee,
 Because we thought our selfe thy lawfull King:
 And if we be, how dare thy ioynts forget

† 76 To pay the awfull duty of our presence?
 If we be not, shew us the hand of God,
 That hath dismis'd us from our Stewardship,
 For well we know no hand of blood and bone
 80 Can gripe the sacred handle of our Scepter,
 Vnlesse he doe prophane, steale or usurpe.

And though you thinke, that all as you have done,
 Have torne their soules, by turning them from us,
 84 And we are barren, and bereft of friends:
 Yet know, my master, God Omnipotent,
 Is mustring in his Clouds, in our behalfe,
 Armies of Pestilence, and they shall strike

Your

of Richard the second.

III.iii.

Your Children yet unborne, and unbegot,
That lift your Vassall hands against my head,
And threat the glory of my precious Crowne.
Tell Bullingbrooke, for yond me thinks he is,
That every stride he makes upon my Land,
Is dangerous Treason: he is come to ope
The purple Testament of bleeding Warre;
But ere the Crowne he lookes for, live in peace,
Ten thousand bloody crownes of Mothers Sonnes
Shall ill become the flower of Englands face,
Change the complexion of her Maide-pale Peace
To Scarlet indignation, and bedew
Her pastors Grassie with faythfull English blood.

Nor. The King of Heaven forbid our Lord the King
Should so with civill and uncivill Armes
Be rust upon: Thy thrice-noble Cofin,
Harry Bullingbrooke, doth humbly kisse thy hand,
And by the honourable Tombe he sweares,
That stands upon your Royall Grandfathers Bones,
And by the royalties of both your bloods.
(Currents that spring from one most gracious head)
And by the buried hand of Warlike Gaunt,
And by the worth and honour of himselfe,
Comprizing all that may be sworne, or sayd,
His comming hither hath no farther scope,
Then for his Lineall Royalties, and to begge
Infranchisement-immediate on his knees:
Which on thy Royall party granted once,
His glittering Armes he will commend to rust,
His barbed Steeds to stables, and his heart
To faythfull service of your Maiesty:
This sweares he as he is a Prince, is just,
And as I am a Gentleman I credit him.

Rich. Northumberland, say thus: The King returns,
His Noble Cofin is right welcome hither,
And all the number of his faire demands
Shall be accomplish'd without contradiction:

Speake to his gentle hearing kind commends.
 VVe doe debase our selfe (Cofin) doe we not,
 To looke so poorely , and to speake so faire ?
 Shall we call backe Northumberland and send
 Defiance to the Traytor and so die ?

Ann. No, good my Lord, let's fight with gentle words,
 Till time lend friends, and friends their hopefull Swords.

Rich. Oh God, oh God, that ere this tongue of mine,
 That layd the sentence of dread Banishment
 On yond proud man, should take it of againe
 VVith words of sooth : O that I were as great
 As is my Griefe, or lesser than my Name,
 Or that I could forget what I have beene,
 Or not remember what I must be now :
 Swell'ft thou proud heart ? Ile giue thee scope to beate,
 Since foes have scope to beate both thee and me.

An. Northumberland comes backe from Bullingbrooke.

Rich. VVhat must the King doe now ? must he submit ?
 The King shall doe it : Must he he depos'd ?
 The King shall be contented : Must he lose
 The Name of King ? o' Gods Name let it goe.
 Ile give my Iewels for a set of beades,
 My gorgeous Pallace, for a Hermitage,
 My gay Apparrell, for an Almes-mans Gowne,
 My figur'd Goblets, for a Dish of Wood,
 My Scepter for a Palmers walking Staffe,
 My Subjects, for a payre of carved Saints,
 And my large Kingdome, for a little Grave,
 A little little Grave, an obscure Grave.

Or Ile be buried in the Kings high-way,
 Some way of common Trade, where Subjects see
 May howrely trample on their Soveraignes Head :
 For on my heart they tread now, whilst I live ;
 And buried once, why not upon my Head ?

Aumerle, thou weep'ft (my tender-hearted Cofin)
 VVee'll make foule Weather with despised Teares :
 Our sighs, and they, shall lodge the Summer Come,
 And make a Dearth in this revolting Land.

Or

of Richard the second.

III.iii.

Or shall we play the wantons, with our woes,
And make some pretty match with shedding teares?
As thus: to drop them still upon one place,
Till they have fretted us a paire of Graves,
VVithin the Earth: and therein layd, there lies
Two Kinsmen digg'd their Graves with weeping Eyes?
VVould not this ill, doe well? well, well, I see
Italke but idly, and you mocke at me.

Most mighty Prince, my Lord Northumberland,
VVhat sayes King Bullingbrooke? will his Majesty
Give Richard leave to live, till Richard die?

You make a legge and Bullingbrooke sayes I,
Nor. My Lord, in the base Court he doth attend

To speake with you, may it please you to come downe.

Rich. Downe, downe I come, like glift'ring Phaeton,
Wanting the manage of unruly Iades.

In the base Court? base Court where Kings grow base,
To come at Traytors calls, and doe them grace. (King,
In the base Court come downe: downe Court, downe
For Night-Owles shriek, where mounting Larks should
Bul. What sayes his Majesty? (sing.)

Nor. Sorrow and grieve of heart
Makes him speake fondly, like a franticke man:
Yet he is come.

Bul. Stand all apart,
And shew faire duty to his Maiesty.
My gracious Lord.

Rich. Faire Cofin,
You debase your Princely knee,
To make the base earth proud with kissing it.
Me rather had, my heart might feele your love,
Than my unpleas'd Eye see your courtesie.
Vp Cofin, up, your Heart is up, I know,
Thus high at least, although your knee below.

Bul. My gracious Lord, I come but for mine owne.

Rich. Your owne is yours, and I am yours, and all.

Bul. So farre be mine, (my most redoubted Lord,)
As my true service shall deferue your love.

III.iii.The Life and Death

Rich. Well you deserv'd:
 They well deserve to have,
 That know the strong'st and surest way to get,
 202 Vncle give me your hand: nay, dry your eyes,
 Teares shew their love but want their remedies.
 Cofin I am too young to be your Father,
 204 Though you are old enough to be my Heire.
 What you will have, Ile give, and willing too,
 For doe we must, what force will have us doe.
 Set on towards London:
 Cofin, is it so?

Bul. Yea, my good Lord.

Rich. Then I must not say no. Flourish, Exeunt.

III.iv.Scæna Quinta.

Enter Queene and two Ladies.

Qu. What sport shall we devise here in this Garden,
 To drive away the heavy thought of Care?

La. Madam, we'll play at Bowles.

Qu. 'Twill make me thinke the world is full of Rubs,
 And that my fortune runnes against the Byas.

La. Madam, we'll Dance.

Qu. My legges can keepe no measure in Delight,
 When my poore heart no measure keeps in Griefe.
 Therefore no Dancing (Girle) some other sport.

La. Madam, we'll tell Tales.

Qu. Of sorrow, or of griefe?

La. Of eyther Madam.

Qu. Of neyther Girle.

For if of ioy, being altogether wanting,
 It doth remember me the more of sorrow:
 Or if of griefe, being altogether had,
 It addes more sorrow to my want of ioy:
 For what I have, I need not to repeat;

And

of Richard the second.

And what I want, it bootes not to complaine.

La. Madam, Ile sing.

Qu. 'Tis well that thou hast cause ;
But thou should'st please me better, would'st thou weepe.

La. I could weepe, Madam, would it doe you good.

Qu. And I could sing, would weeping doe me good,
And never borrow any Teare of thee.

Enter a Gardiner, and two Servants.

But stay, heere come the Gardiners.

Let's step into the shadow of these Trees.

My wretchednesse, unto a Row of Pinnes,

They'le talke of state : forevery one doth so,
Against a change, Woe is fore-runne with woe.

Gard. Goe bindethou up yond dangling Apricocks.

VVhich like unruly Children, make their Syre
Stoupe with oppression of their prodigall weight ;

Give some supportance to the bending twigges.

Goe thou, and like an Executioner

Cut off the heads of too fast growing sprays.

That looke too lofty in our Common-wealth:

All must be even, in our Governement.

You thus imploy'd, I will goe root away

The noysome weedes, that without profit sucke

The Soyles fertility from wholesome flowers.

Ser. Why should we, in the compasse of a Pale,

Keepe Law and Forme, and due Proportion,

Shewing as in a Modell our firme state ?

When our Sea-walled Garden, (the whole Land)

Is full of Weedes, her fairest Flowers choakt up,

Her Fruit-trees all unpruin'd, her Hedges ruin'd,

Her Knots disorder'd, and her wholesome Hearbes

Swarming with Caterpillers.

Gard. Hold thy peace.

He that hath suffer'd this disorder'd Spring,

Hath now himselfe met with the Fall of Lease.

The Weedes that his broad-spreading Leaves did shelter,

That seem'd, in eating him, to hold him up,

Are pull'd up, Root, and all, by Bullingbrooke ;

III.iv.

The Life and Death

I meane the Earle of Wiltshire, Bashy, Greene,

Ser. What are they dead ?

Gard. They are,

And Bullingbrooke hath feis'd the wastefull King.

What pittie is it, that he hath not trim'd

And drest his Land, as we this Garden, at time of yeare ;

And wound the Barke, the skin of our Fruite-trees,

Least being over-proud with Sap and Blood,

With too much riches it confound it selfe ?

Had he done so to great and growing men,

They might have liv'd to beare, and he to taste

Their fruits of duty. All superfluous branches

We lop away, that bearing boughes may live:

Had he done so, himselfe had borne the Crowne,

Which waste and idle houres, hath quite throwne downe.

Ser. VVhat thinke you the King shall be depos'd ?

Gard. Deprest he is already, and depos'd

'Tis doubted he will be: Letters came last night

To a deare friend of the Duke of Torke,

That tell blacke tidings.

Qu. Oh I am prest to death, through want of speaking:

Thou old Adams likenesse, set to dresse this Garden:

How dares thy harsh tongue sound this displeasing

What Eve, what serpent hath suggested thee, (newes ?

To make a second fall of cursed man ?

Why do'st thou say King Richard is depos'd ?

Dar'st thou, (thou little better thing then earth)

Divine his downefall ? Say where, when, and how

Cam'st thou by this ill tydings ? Speake thou wretch.

Gard. Pardon me Madam. Little joy have I

To breath these newes ; yet what I say, is true ;

King Richard, he is in the mighty hold

Of Bullingbrooke, their fortunes both are weigh'd :

In your Lords Scale, is nothing but himselfe,

And some few vanities, that make him light :

But in the Ballance of great Bullingbrooke,

Besides himselfe, are all the English Peeres,

And with that oddes he weiges King Richard downe.

Post

of Richard the second.

III.IV.

Post you to London, and you'll finde it so,
I speake no more, then every one doth know.

Qu. Nimble mischance, that art so light of foote,
Doth not thy Embassage belong to me?

And am I last that know it? Oh thou think'st

To serue me last, that I may longest keepe

Thy sorrow in my breast. Come Ladies goe,

To meet at London, Londons King in woe.

What, was I borne to this? that my sad looke

Should grace the Triumph of great Bullingbrooke!

Gard'ner, for telling me this newes of woe.

I would the Plants thou graft'st may never grow. Exit.

Gard. Poore Queene, so that thy state might be no

I would my skill were subiect to thy curse: (worse,

Here did she drop a teare, here in this place

He set a Banke of Rew, (sowre Herbe of Grace:)

Rue, ev'n for ruth, here shortly shall be seene,

In the remembrance of a weeping Queene. Exit.

Actus Quartus, Scæna Prima.

Enter as to the Parliament, Bullingbrooke, Aumerle, Northumberland, Percy, Fitz-Water, Surrey, Carlile, Abbot of Westminster, Herald, Officers, and Bagot.

Bul. Call forth Bagot.

Now Bagot, freely speake thy mind,

What thou dost know of Noble Glosters death,

Who wrought it with the King, and who perform'd

The bloody Office of his timelesse end,

Bag. Then set before my face the Lord Aumerle.

Bul. Cosin, stand forth and looke upon that man.

Bag. My Lord Aumerle, I know your daring tongue

Scornes to unsay what it hath once deliver'd.

In that dead time, when Glosters death was plotted,

I

IV.i.

The Life and Death

12 I heard you say, Is not my arme of length,
That reacheth from the restfull English Court
As farre as Callis, to my Vncles head?
Amongst much other talke, that very time,
16 I heard you say, that you had rather refuse
The offer of an hundred thousand Crownes.
Then Dallingbrookes returne to England; adding withall,
How blest this Land would be, in this your Colins death.

Aum. Princes and Noble Lords:

20 What answer shall I make to this base man:
Shall I so much dishonour my faire starres,
On equall termes to give him chastisement?
† Eyther I must, or have mine honour spoyl'd
24 With th' Atteindor of his stand'rous lips,
There is my Gage, the manuall scale of death
That markes thee out for hell. Thou lyest,
And will maintaine what thou hast sayd, is false,
† 28 In thy hearts blood, though being all too base,
To staine the temper of my Knightly sword.

Bul. Bagot forbear, thou shalt not take it up.

Aum. Excepting one, I would he were the best
32 In all this preface, that hath moovd me so.

Fitz. If that thy valour stand on sympathies:
There is my Gage, Aumerle, in Gage to thine:
By that faire sunne, that shewes me where thou stand'st,
36 I heard thee say, (and vantly thou spak'st it)
That thou wert cause of Noble Glosters death.
If thou deniest it, twenty times thou lyest,
And I will turne thy falsehood to thy heart,
40 Where it was forged, with my Raplers poynt.

Aum. Thou dar'st not (Coward) live to see the day.

Fitz. Now by my Soule, I would it were this houre.

Aum. Fitzwater thou art damn'd to hell for this.

44 Per. Aumerle, thou lyest: his honour is as true
In this appeale, as thou art all uniuist:
And that thou art so, there I throw my Gage
To prove it on thee, to th' extreamest poynt
48 Of mortall breathing. Seize it if thou dar'st.

Aum.

of Richard the second.

IV.i

Aum. And if I doe not, may my hands rot off,
And never brandish more revengefull Steele,
Over the glittering Helme of my Foe.

Sur. My Lord Fitzwater;
I doe remember well, the very time
Aumerle, and you did talke.

Fitz. My Lord,
Tis very true: You were in presence then;
And you can witnesse with me, this is true.

Sur. As false, by heaven,
As heaven it selfe is true.

Fitz. Surry, thou lyeest,
Sur. Dishonourable Boy;
That lye shall lye so heauy on my sword,
That it shall render Vengeance and Revenge,
Till thou the Lye-giver, and that lye, doe lye
In earth as quiet, as thy Fathers Scull.
In prooffe whereof, there is mine Honours pawne,
Engage it to the Tryall, if thou dar'st.

Fitz. How fondly dost thou spurne a forward Horse?
If I dare eate, or drinke, or breath, or live,
I dare meete Surry in a Wildernesse,
And spit upon him, whilst I say he lies,
And lies, and lies: there is my bond of Faith,
To tie thee to my strong Correction.
As I intended to thrive in this new world,
Aumerle is guilty of my true appeale.
Besides, I heard the banish'd Norfolke say,
That thou Aumerle didst send two of thy men,
To execute the Noble Duke at Callis.

Aum. Some honest Christian trust me with a Gage,
That Norfolke lies, here doe I throw downe this,
If he may be repeald, to try his honour.

Bul. These differences shall all rest under Gage,
Till Norfolke be repeal'd: repeal'd he shall be;
(And though mine Enemy) restor'd againe
To all his Lands and Seigniories: when hee's return'd,
Against Aumerle we will inforce his Tryall.

 To the Bosome of good old Abraham
 Lords Appealants, your differences shall all rest under Till we assigne you to your dayes of Tryall. (gage,

Enter Turke.

Turke. Great Duke of Lancaster, I come to thee
 From Plume-pluckt Richard, who with willing soule
 Adopts thee Heire, and his high Scepter yeelds
 To the possession of thy Royall Hand.
 Ascend his Throne, descending now from him,
 And long live Henry, of that Name the Fourth.

Bul. In Gods Name, Ile ascend the Regall throne,

Carl. Mary, Heaven forbid.

VVorst in this Royall Presence may I speake,
 Yet best befeeming me to speake the truth.
 Would God, that any in this Noble Presence
 Were enough Noble to be upright Iudge
 Of Noble Richard; then true Noblenesse would
 Learne him forbearance from so foule a Wrong.
 What subject can give sentence on his King?
 And who sits here, that is not Richards subject?
 Theeves are not judg'd, but they are by to heare
 Although apparant guilt be seene in them:
 And shall the figure of Gods Majesty,
 His Captaine, steward, Deputy elect,
 Anoynted, Crown'd and planted many yeares.

Be

of Richard the second.

IV.i.

Be judg'd by subjects, and inferior breath,
 And he himselfe not present? Oh, forbid, it God,
 That in a Christian Climate, soules refine
 Should shew so heynous, blacke, obscene a deed.
 I speake to subjects, and a subject speakes,
 Stir'd up by Heaven, thus boldly for his King.
 My Lord of Hereford here, whom you call King,
 Is a foule Traytor to prowd Herefords King.
 And if you Crowne him, let me prophecy,
 The blood of English shall manure the ground,
 And future ages groane for his foule Act.
 Peace shall goe sleepe with Turkes and Infidels,
 And in this Seat of Peace, tumultuous Warres
 Shall Kinne with Kinne, and Kinde with Kinde confound,
 Disorder, Horror, Feare, and Mutiny
 Shall here inhabite and this Land be call'd
 The field of Golgotha, and dead mens sculls.
 Oh, if you reare this House against this House
 It will the wofullest Division prove,
 That ever fell upon this curfed Earth.
 Prevent it, resist it, let it not be so,
 Least Child, Childs Children cry against you, VVoe.
North. Well have you argu'd Sir: and for your paines.
 Of Capitall Treason we arrest you here.
 My Lord of Westminster, be it your charge,
 To keepe him safely, till his day of Tryall.
 May it please you, Lords, to grant the Commons Suit?
Bull. Fetch hither Richard, that in common view
 He may surrender: so we shall proceede
 VVithout suspition.

Tor. I will be his Conduct.

Exit.

Bull. Lords, you that here are under our Arrest,
 Procure your Sureties for your Dayes of Answer:
 Little are we beholding to your Love,
 And little look'd for at your helping Hands:

Enter Richard and Torke.

Rich. Alack, why am I sent for to a King,
 Before I have shooke off the Regall thoughts

Wherewith I reign'd ? I hardly yet have learn'd
To insinuate, flatter, bow, and bend my Knee.
Give Sorrow leave a while, to returne me
To this submission. Yet I will remember

168

The favors of these men : were they not mine ?
Did they not sometime cry, All haile to me ?
So Indar did to Christ : but he in twelve,
Found truth in all, but one ; I, in twelve thousand, none.
God save the King : will no man say, Amen ?
Am I both Priest and Clarke ? well then, Amen.
God save the King, although I be not he:
And yet Amen, if Heaven doe thinke him me.
To doe what service, am I sent for hither ?

172

Ter. To doe that office of thine owne good will,
VWhich tyred Majesty did make thee offer:
The Resignation of thy State and Crowne
To Henry Bullingbrooke.

180

Rich. Give me the Crown. Here Cofin. feize the Crown:
Here Cofin, on this side my Hand, on that side thine.
Now is this Golden Crowne like a deepe Well,
That owest two Buckets, filling one another,
The emptier ever dancing in the ayre,
The other downe, unseene, and full of Water :
That Bucket downe, and full of Teares am I,
Drinking my Griefes, whilst you mount up on high.

184

188

Bul. I thought you had beene willing to resigne.

Rich. My Crowne I am, but still my Griefes are mine:
You may my Glories and my State depose,
But not my Griefes ; still am I King of those.

192

Bul. Part of your Cares you give me with your Crown.

Rich. Your Cares set up, doe not pluck my Cares down.
My Care, is losse of Care, by old Care done,
Your Care, is gaine of Care, by new Care wonne :
The Cares I giue, I have, though given away,
They tend the Crowne, yet still with me they stay :

196

200

Bul. Are you contented to resigne the Crowne ?

Rich. I no ; no, I : for I must nothing be :
Therefore no, no, for I resigne to thee.

Now,

of Richard the second.

IV.i.

Now, marke me how I will undoe my selfe.
 I give this heauy weight from off my Head,
 And this unwieldy Scepter from my hand,
 The pride of Kingly sway from out my heart.
 With mine owne Teares I wash away my blame,
 With mine owne hands I give away my Crowne.
 With mine owne Tongue deny my sacred State,
 With mine owne breath releafe all dutious Oathes :
 All pompe and Maiesty I doe forswear:
 My Mannors, Rents, Reuenews, I forgoe;
 My Acts, Decrees, and Statutes I deny :
 God pardon all Oathes that are broke to me,
 God keepe all vowes unbroke are made to thee.
 Make me, that nothing haue, with nothing griev'd,
 And thou withall pleas'd, that hast all achiev'd,
 Long mayst thou live in Richards Seat to sit,
 And soone lie Richard in an earthy pit.
 God save King Henry, un-king'd Richard sayes,
 And send him many yeares of sunne-shine dayes.
 What more remaines ?

Nor. No more: but that you read
 These Accusations, and these grievous Crymes,
 Committed by your person, and your followers
 Against the State, and profit of this Land :
 That by confessing them, the soules of men
 May deeme, that you are worthily depos'd.

Rich. Must I doe so? and must I rayell out
 My weav'd up follies? Gentle Northumberland,
 If thy Offences were upon Record,
 Would it not shame thee in so faire a troupe,
 To read a Lecture of them? If thou would'st,
 There should'st thou find one haynous Article
 Containing the deposing of a King,
 And cracking the strong warrant of an Oath,
 Mark'd with a Blot, damn'd in the booke of Heaven.
 Nay, all of you that stand and looke upon me,
 Whil'st that my wretchednesse doth bait my selfe,
 Though some of you, with Pilate wash your hands,

Shewing an outward pittie : yet you Pilates
Have here deliver'd me to my lowre Crosse,
And Water cannot wash away your sinne.

Nor. My Lord dispatch, read o're these Articles.

244

Rich. Mine eyes are full of teares, I cannot see :
And yet salt-water blindes them not so much,
But they can see a sort of Traytors here.

248

Nay, if I turne mine eyes upon my selfe,
I finde my selfe a Traytor with the rest
For I have given here my soules consent,
T' undecke the pompous body of a King;
Made glory bale, a soveraigne, a slave ;
Proud Maiefty, a subiect & ; State, a Pesant, 252

Nor. My Lord.

256

Rich. No Lord of thine, thou haught-insulting man;
No, nor no mans Lord : I have no Name, no Title ;
No, not that Name was given me at the Fort,
But 'tis usurpt: alacke the heavy day,
That I have worne so many Winters out,
And know not now, what Name to call my selfe.
Oh, that I were a mockery, King of Snow,
Standing before the sunne of Bullingbrooke,
To melt my selfe away in Water-drops:
Good King, great King, and yet not greatly good,
And if my word be sterling yet in England,
Let it command a mirror hither straight,
That it may shew me what a face I have,
Since it is Bankrupt of his Maiefty.

264

268

Bul. Goe some of you, and fetch a Looking Glasse.

Nor. Read o're this Paper, while the Glasse doth come.

Rich. Fiend, thou torments me ere I come to Hell.

Bul. Vrge it no more my Lord Northumberland.

272

Nor. The Commons will not then be satisfy'd.

Rich. They shall be satisfy'd : ile reade enough,
When I doe see the very Booke indeed,
Where all my sinnes are writ, and that's my selfe.

276

Enter one with a Glasse.

Give me that Glasse, and therein will I reade.

No

of Richard the second.

IV.i.

No deeper wrinkles yet? hath sorrow strucke
 So many blowes upon this face of mine,
 And made no deeper wounds? Oh flattering Glasse,
 Like to my followers in prosperity,
 Thou dost beguile me. Was this face the face
 That every day, under his household Roofe,
 Did keepe ten thousand men? was this the face,
 That like the sunne did make beholders winke?
 Is this the face, which fac'd so many follyes,
 That was at last out-fac'd by Bullingbrooke?
 A brittle glory shineth in this face,
 As brittle as the Glory, is the face,
 For there it is, crackt in an hundred shivers.
 Marke silent King, the Morall of this sport,
 How soone my sorrow hath destroy'd my face.
Bul. The shadow of your sorrow hath destroy'd
 The shadow of your face.

Rich. Say that againe.

The shadow of my sorrow: ha, lets see,
 'Tis very true, my griefe lyes all within,
 And these externall manners of laments,
 Are meere shadows to the unscene griefe,
 That swells with silence in the tortur'd soule:
 There lies the substance: and I thanke thee King
 For thy great bounty, that not onely giv'st
 Me cause to waile, but teachest me the way
 How to lament the cause. Ile begge one boone,
 And then be gone, and trouble you no more.
 Shall I obtaine it?

Bul. Name it, faire Cofin.

Rich. Faire Cofin? I am greater than a King:
 For when I was a King, my flatterers
 Were then my subiects; being now a subiect,
 I have a King here to my flatterer:
 Being so great, I have no need to begge.

Bul. Yet aske.

That rise thus nimble by a true Kings fall.

320

Bul. On wednesday next, we solemnly set downe
Our Coronation; Lords prepare your selves. Exeunt.

Abbot. A wofull Pageant haue we here beheld.

Carl. The woe's to come, the children yet un-borne,
Shall feele this day as sharpe to them as thorne.

324

Aum. You holy clergy-men, is there no plot
To rid the Realme of this pernicious blot?

328

Abbot. Before I freely speake my minde herein,
You shall not onely take the Sacrament,
To bury mine intents, but also to effect
What ever I shall happen to devise.

Your heart of sorrow, and your eyes of teares,
Come home with me to supper, ile lay a plot

Actus Quintus, Scæna Prima.

Qu. This way the King will come: this is the way
To Iulius Cæsars ill-erected Tower:
To whose sint boosome, my condemned Lord
Is doom'd a Prisoner, by proud Ballingbrooke.
Here let us rest, if this rebellious Earth
Have any resting for her true Kings Queene.

of Richard the second.

V.i.

And wash him fresh againe with true-love teares.
Ah thou the modell where old Troy did stand,
Thou map of honour, thou King Richards Tombe,
And not King Richard: thou most beauteous Inne,
Why should hard-favor'd griefe be lodg'd in thee,
When triumph is become an Ale-house guest?

Rich. Ioyne not with griefe, faire Woman, doe not so,
To make my end too sudden; learne good soule,
To thinke our former State a happy dreame,
From which awak'd, the truth of what we are,
Shewes us but this. I am sworne Brother (sweet)
To grim necessity; and he and I
Will keepe a League till Death. High thee to France,
And Cloyster thee in some Religious house:
Our holy lives must win a new worlds Crowne,
Which our prophane houres here have stricken downe.

Qu. What, is my Richard both in shape and mind
Transform'd, and weaken'd? Hath Bullingbrooke
Depos'd thine Intellect? hath hee bene in thy heart?
The Lyon dying thrusteth forth his paw,
And wounds the earth, if nothing else, with rage
To be o're-powr'd: and wilt thou, Pupil-like,
Take thy Correction mildly, kisse the Rodde,
And fawne on rage with base humility,
Which art a Lyon, and a King of Beasts?

Rich. A King of beasts indeed, if aught but beasts,
I had bene still a happy King of Men.
Good (sometime Queene) prepare thee hence for France:
Thinke I am dead, and that even heere thou tak'st,
As from my death-bed, my last living leave.
In winters tedious night sit by the fire
With good old folkes, and let them tell thee tales
Of woefull ages, long agoe betide:
And ere thou bid goodnight, to quit their griefe,
Tell thou the lamentable fall of me,
And send the hearers weeping to their beds:
For why? the sencelesse Brands will sympathize
The heavy accent of my moving tongue,

And in compassion, weepe the fire out :
And some will moune in Ashes, some coale-blacke,
For the deposing of a rightfull King.

Enter Northumberland.

52

North. My Lord, the mind of Bullingbrooke is chang'd.
You must to Pomfret, not unto the Tower.
And Madam, there is order ta'ne for you :
VVith all swift speed, you must away to France.

56

Rich. Northumberland, thou Ladder wherewithall
The mounting Bullingbrooke ascends my Throne,
The time shall not be many houres of age,
More than it is, ere foule sinne, gathering head,
Shall breake into corruption : thou shalt thinke,
Though he deuide the Realme, and give thee halfe,

60

It is too little, helping him to all :
He shall thinke, that thou which know'st the way
To plant unrightfull Kings, wilt know againe.

64

Being ne're so little urg'd, another way,
To plucke him headlong from th' usurped Throne.
The Love of wicked friends converts to Feare ;
That Feare, to Hate ; and Hate turnes one or both,
To worthy Danger, and deserved Death.

68

North. My guilt be on my Head, and there an end :
Take leave, and part, for you must part forthwith.

72

Rich. Doubly divorce'd ? (bad men) ye violate
A two-fold Marriage ; 'twixt my Crowne, and me,
And then betwixt me, and my marryed VVife.
Let me un-kisse the Oath 'twixt thee and me ;
And yet not so, for with a kisse 'twas made
Part us Northumberland : I, towards the North,
Where shivering Cold and Sicknesse pines the Clyme :
My Queene to France : from whence, set forth in pompe,
She came adorned hither like sweet may ;
Sent backe Hollowmas, or short of day.

76

† 80

Qu. And must we be divided ? must we part ?

Rich. I, hand from hand (my Love) and heart fro heart.

Qu. Banish us both, and send the King with me.

84

North. That were some Love, but little Pollicy.

Qu.

of Richard the second.

Vi.

Qu. Then whither he goes thither let me goe.

Rich. So two together weeping, make one Woe,
Weepe thou for me in France; I, for thee here:
Better farre off, than nere, be ne're the neere.

Goe, count thy way with sighes, I, mine with Groanes.

Qu. So longest way shall have the longest moanes.

Rich. Twice for one step ile groane, the way being short,
And piece the way out with a heavy heart.

Come, come, in woiing sorrow let's be brieft,
Since wedding it, there is such length in griefe:
One kisse shall stop our mouthes, and doubly part;
Thus give I mine, and thus thus take I thy heart.

Qu. Give me mine owne againe: 'twere no good part,
To take on me to keepe, and kill thy heart.
So, now I have mine owne againe, be gone,
That I may strive to kill it with a groane.

Rich. We make woe wanton with this fond delay:
Once more adieu; the rest let sorrow say. Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda.

V.ii.

Enter Yorke, and his Duchesse.

Dut. My Lord, you told me you would tell the rest,
When weeping made you breake the story off,
Of our two Cofins comming into London.

Yor. Where did I leave?

Dut. At that sad stoppe, my Lord.
Where rude mis-govern'd hands, from windowes tops,
Threw dust and rubbish on King Richards head.

Yor. Then, as I sayd, the Duke (great Bullingbrooke,)
Mouned upon a hot and fiery Steed,
Which his aspiring Rider seem'd to know,
With slow, but stately pace, kept on his course:
While all tongues cri'd, God save thee Bullingbrooke,
You would have thought the very windowes spake,

V.ii.

The Life and Death

So many greedy lookes of young and old,
 Through Casements darted their desiring eyes.
 Vpon his visage ; and that all the walles
 With painted Imagery had sayd at once,
 Iesu preserve thee, welcome Bullingbrooke.
 Whil'ft he , from one side to the other turning,
 Bare-headed , lower then his proud Steeds necke,
 Bespake them thus : I thanke you Countri-men ;
 And thus still doing, thus he past along.

Dutch. Alas poore Richard, where rides he the whilst?

York. As in a Theater, the eyes of men
 After a well grac'd Actor leaves the stage,
 Are idly bent on him that enters next,
 Thinking his prattle to be tedious .

Even so, or with much more contempt, mens eyes
 Did scowle on Richard ; no man cride, God save him;
 No joyfull tongue gave him his welcome home,
 But dust was throwne upon his sacred head,
 Which with such gentle sorrow he shooke off,
 His face still combating with teares and smiles
 (The badges of his greefe and patience)
 That had not God (for some strong purpose) steel'd
 The hearts of men, they must perforce have melted,
 And Barbarisme it selfe have pittied him.
 But Heaven hath a hand in these events,
 To whose high will we bound our calme contents,
 To Bullingbrooke , are we sworne Subjects now,
 Whose State, and Honour, I for aye allow.

Enter Aumerle.

Dut. Heere comes my sonne Aumerle.

Yor. Aumerle that was,
 But that is lost, for being Richards Friend.
 And Madam, you must call him Rutland now;
 I am in Parliament pledge for his truth,
 And lasting fealty in the new-made King.

Dut. Welcome my sonne ; who are the Violets now,
 That strew the greene lap of the new-come Spring ?

Aum. Madam, I know not, nor I greatly care not,

God

Yor. You will be there I know.

Ann. If God prevent not, I purpose so.

Yor. What seale is that that hangs without thy bosome
Yea, look'st thou pale? Let me see the writing.

Ann. My Lord, 'tis nothing.

Yor. No matter then who sees it,
I will be satisfied, let me see the writing.

Ann. I do beseech your Grace to pardon me,
It is a matter of small consequence,

VVhich for some reasons I would not have scene.

Yor. VVhich for some reasons sir, I meane to see:
I feare, I feare.

Dut. VVhat should you feare?
'Tis nothing but some Bond, that he is entred into
For gay apparrell against the Triumph.

Yor. Bound to himselfe? what doth he with a bond
That he is bound to? wife, you are a foole.
Boy, let me see the writing.

Ann. I doe beseech you pardon me, I may not shew it.

Yor. I will be satisfied, let me see't I say: Snatches it.
Treason, foule treason, villaine, traytor, slave.

Dut. VVhat's the matter, my Lord?

Yor. Hoa, who's within there; saddle my horse,
Heaven for his mercy what treachery is here?

Dut. Why, what is't my Lord?

Yor. Give me my boots, I say; Saddle my horse:
Now by my honour, my life, my troth.

I will appeach the villaine.

Dut. What is the matter?

Yor. Peace foolish woman.

Dut. I will not peace, what is the matter some?

Ann. Good mother be content, it is no more
Then my poore life must answer.

The Life and Death

Dut. Thy life answer?

Enter Servant with Boots.

84 Tor. Bring my Boots, I will unto the King.

Dut. Strike him Aumerle. Poore boy, thou art amaz'd,
Hence Villaine, never more come in my fight.

Tor. Give me my Boots I say.

88 Dut. Why Yorke, what wilt thou doe?

Wilt thou not hide the trespassse of thine owner?
Have we more sonnes? Or are we like to have?
Is not my teeming date drunke up with time?
92 And wilt thou plucke my faire sonne from mine Age,
And rob me of a happy mothers name?
Is he not like thee? is he not thine owne?

† Tor. Thou fond and mad woman,
96 Wilt thou conceale this darke conspiracy?
A dozen of them here have tane the Sacrament,
And enterchangeably set downe their hands
To kill the King at Oxford.

Dut. He shall be none:

100 Wee'l keepe him here: then what is that to him:

Tor. Away fond woman: were he twenty times my sonne, I would appeach him.

Dut. Hadst thou groan'd for him, as I have done,
Thou wouldest be more pittifull:

104 But now I know thy minde; thou dost suspect
That I have beene disloyall to thy bed,
And that he is a bastard, not thy sonne:
Sweet Yorke, sweet husband, be not of that mind:
108 He is as like thee, as a man may be,
Not like to me, nor any of my Kin,
And yet I love him.

Tor. Make way, unruly woman. Exit.

112 Dut. After Aumerle. Mount thee upon his Horse,
Spurne post, and get before him to the King,
And beg thy pardon, ere he doe accuse thee,
He not be long behinde: though I be old,
I doubt not but to ride as fast as Yorke:
116 And never will I rise up from the ground,

Till

Enter Bullingbrooke, Percy, and other Lords.

Bul. Can no man tell of my unchristy sonne?
'Tis full three monthes since I did see him last.
If any plague hang over us, 'tis he:
I would to heaven (my Lords) he might be found,
Enquire at London, 'mongst the Tavernes there:
For there (they say) he daily doth frequent,
With un-restrained loose Companions,
Even such (they say) as stand in narrow Lanes,
And rob our watch, and beate our passengers,
Which he (young wanton, and effeminate Boy)
Takes on the poynt of honour, to support
So dissolute a crew.

Per. My Lord, some two dayes since I saw the Prince,
And told him of these triumphes held at Oxford.

Bul. And what sayd the Gallant?

Per. His answer was, he would unto the stews,
And from the common'st creature plucke a glove
And weare it as a favour, and with that
He would unhorse the lustiest challenger.

Bul. As dissolute as desperate, yet through both,
I see some sparks of better hope: which elder dayes
May happily bring forth. But who comes here?

Enter Aumerle.

Aum. Where is the King?

Bul. What meanes my Cousin, that he stares
And lookes so wildly? (jeisty

And now chang'd to the begger, and the King :
My dangerous Cofin, let your Mother in,
I know she's come to pray for your soule sin.

Ter. If thou do pardon, whosoever pray,
More finnes for this forgivenesse, prosper may.
This fester'd joynt cut off, the rest rests sound,
This let alone, will all the rest confound. Enter Duchesse.

Duc. O King, beleeve not this hard-hearted man,
Love, loving not it selfe, none other can.

Ter. Thou franticke woman, what dost thou make here,
Shall thy old dugges once more a Traitor reare?

Duc. Sweet Turke be patients, heare me gentle Liege-

Bul. Rise up good Aunt.

Duc. Not yet, I thee beseech.

For ever will I kneele upon my knees,
And never see day that the happy sees,
Till thou give joy : vntill thou bid me ioy,
By pardoning Rutland, my transgressing Boy.

Aunt. Vnto my Mothers prayers, I bend my knee-

Turke. Against them both, my true joynts bended be.

Duc. Pleadest he in earnest? Looke upon his Face,
His eyes do drop no teares : his prayers are in iest :
His words come from his mouth, ours from our breast
He prayes but faintly, and would be deny'd,
VVe pray with heart, and soule, and all beside :

His weary joynts would gladly rise, I know,
 Our knees shall kneele, till to the ground they grow:
 His prayers are full of false hypocrisy,
 Ours of true zeale, and deepe integrity:
 Our prayers do out-pray his, then let him have
 That mercy which true prayers ought to have.

Bul. Good Annt stand up.

Dnt. Nay, doe not say stand up.

But pardon first, and afterwards stand up.
 And if I were thy Nurse thy tongue to teach,
 Pardon should be the first word of thy speech.
 I never long'd to heare a word till now:

Say Pardon (King,) let pittie teach thee how.
 The word is short, but not so short as sweet,

No word like Pardon, for Kings mouth's so meet.

Tor. Speake it in French, (King) say, Pardon ne moy.

Dnt. Dost thou teach pardon, Pardon to destroy?

Ah my sowre husband, my hard-hearted Lord,
 That set'st the word it selfe, against the word.

Speake pardon as 'tis currant in our Land,
 The chopping French we doe not understand.

Thine eye begins to speake, set thy tongue there;
 Or in thy pittious heart, plant thou thine eare.
 That hearing how your plaints and prayers doe pearce,
 Pittie may move thee, pardon to rehearse.

Bul. Good Aunt stand up.

Dnt. I doe not sue to stand,

Pardon is all the suit I have in hand.

Bul. I pardon him as heaven shall pardon me,

Dnt. O happy vantage of a kneeling knee:

Yet am I sicke for feare, speake it againe,
 Twice saying pardon, doth not pardon twaine,
 But makes one pardon strong.

Bul. I pardon him with all my heart.

Dnt. A God on earth thou art.

Bul. But for our trusty brother-in-law, the Abbot,
 With all the rest of that comforted crew,
 Destruction straight shall dogge them at the heeles.

Good Vncle helpe to order severall powers
To Oxford, or where ere these traytors are :
They shall not live within this world I sweare,
But I will have them if I once knew where.
Vncle farewell, and Cofin too adieu :
Your mother well hath pray'd, and prove you true.

Ex. Didst thou not marke the King what words he spake.
Have I no friend will rid me of this living feare :
Was it not so ?

Ser. Those were his words.

Ex. Have I no friend (quoth he) he spake it twice,
And urg'd it twice together did he not ?

Ser. He did.

Ex. And speaking it he wistly look'd on me,
As who should say, I would thou wert the man,
That would divorcethis terror from my heart,
Meaning the King at Pomfret : Come, let's goe,
I am the Kings friend, and will rid his Foe.

Enter Richard.

Rich. I have beene studying how to compare
This Prison where I live, unto the world :
And for because the world is populous,
And here is not a creature, but my selfe,
I cannot doe it : yet ile hammer't out.
My braine, ile prove the female to my Soule
My soule, the Father : and these two beget
A generation of still breeding thoughts ;
And these same thoughts, people this little world
In humors like the people of this world,
For no thought is contented. The better sort,

The Life and Death

12 As thoughts of things Divine, are intermixt
 With scruples, and do set the Faith it selfe
 Against the Faith ; as thus Comelittle ones ; and then 16 It is as hard to come, as for a Camell (againe,
 To thred the posterne of a Needles eye.
 Thoughts tending to Ambition, they do plot
 Vnlikely wonders ; how these vaine weake nailes
 20 May teare a passage through the Flinty ribbes
 Of this hard world, my ragged prison walles ;
 And for they cannot, dye in their owne pride.
 Thoughts tending to Content, flatter themselves,
 24 That they are not the first of Fortunes slaves,
 Nor shall not be the last. Like silly Beggars,
 † Who sitting in the Stockes , refuse that shame
 That many have , and others must sit there ;
 28 And in this thought, they finde a kind of ease,
 Bearing their owne misfortune on the backe
 Of such as have before indur'd the like.
 Thus play I in one Prison, many people,
 32 And none contented. Sometimes am I King ;
 Then Treason makes me with my selfe a Begger,
 And so I am. Then crushing penury,
 Perswades me, I was better when a King ;
 36 Then am I king'd againe ; and by and by,
 Thinke that I am un-king'd by Bullingbrooke,
 And straight am nothing. But what ere I am, Musicke.
 Nor I, nor any man, that but man is,
 40 With nothing shall be pleas'd, till he be eas'd
 With being nothing. Musicke doe I heare ?
 Ha, ha ? keepe time ; How fowre sweet Musicke is,
 When time is broke, and no Proportion kept ?
 44 So is it in the Musicke of mens lives :
 And here have I the daintinesse of eare,
 To heare time broke in a disorder'd string :
 But for the Concord of my State and time,
 48 Had not an eare to heare my true Time broke.
 I wasted Time, and now doth Time waste me :
 For now hath time made me his numbring Clocks :

V.v.

My thoughts, are minutes ; and with sighes they iarre,
There watches to mine eyes the outward Watch,
Whereto my finger, like a Dialls point,
Is poynting still, in clesning them from teares.
Now fir, the sound that tels what houre it is,
Are clamorous grones, that strike upon my heart,
Which is the bell: so sighes and teares, and grones,
Shew minutes, houres, and times: O but my time
Runs poasting on, in Bullingbrookes proud ioy,
While I stand fooling here, his jacks o'th' Clocke.
This Musicke mads me, let it sound no more,
For though it have holpe mad men to their wits,
In me it seemes, it will make wife-men mad:
Yet blessing on his heart that gives it me;
For 'tis a signe of love, and love to Richard,
Is a strange brooch, in this all-hating world.

Enter Groome.

Groo. Haile Royall Prince.

Rich. Thanks Noble Peere.

The cheapest of us, is ten grotes to deare.
What art thou? And how com'st thou hither?
Where no man ever comes, but that sad dogge
That brings me food, to make misfortune live?

Groo. I was a poore Groome of thy stable (King)
When thou wert King, who travelling towards Yorke,
VVith much adoo, at length have gotten leave
To looke upon my (sometimes Royall) masters face.
O how it yern'd my heart, when I beheld
In London streets, that Coronation day,
VVhen Bullingbrooke rode on Roane Barbary,
That Horle, that thou so often hast bestrid,
That Horle, that I so carefully have drest.

Rich. Rode he on Barbary? tell me gentle friend,
How went he under him?

Groo. So proudly, as if he had disdain'd the ground.

Rich. So proud, that Bullingbrooke was on his backe;
That jade hath eate bread from my Royall hand.
This hand hath made him proud with clapping him.

Would he not stumble? would he not fall downe
 (Since pride must have a fall) and breake the necke
 Of that proud man, that did usurpe his backe?

 Since thou created to be aw'd by man
 Was't borne to beare? I was not made a horse
 And yet I beare a burthen like an Asse,
 Spur-gall'd, and tyr'd by jauncing Bullingbrooke,

lay. Keep. My Lord wilt please you to fall too?

Rich. Taste of it first, as thou wer't wont to doo.

Keep. My Lord I dare not: Sir Percy of Exton,
 Who lately came from th King, commands the contrary.

Rich. The divell take Henry of Lancaster, and thee;
 Patience is stale and I am weary of it.

Keep. Helpe, helpe, helpe.

Enter Exton and Servants.

Ri. How now? what meanes death in this rude assault?
 Villaine, thine owne hand yeilds thy deaths instrument,
 Goe thou and fill another roome in hell.

Exton strikes him downe.

That hand shall burne in never-quenching fire,
 That staggers thus my person. Exton, thy fierce hand,
 Hath with the Kings blood, stain'd the Kings owne land.
 Mount, mount my soule, thy seate is up on high,
 Whil'ft my grosse flesh sinkes downward here to dye.

Ex. As full of valour as of Royall blood.

Both have I spilt: Oh would the deed were good,
 For now the divell, that told me I did well,
 Sayes that this deed is Chronicled in hell.
 This dead King to the living King ile beare,
 Take hence the rest, and give them buriall here.

Nor. First, to thy sacred state, with I all happineffe:
The next newes is, I have to London sent
The heads of Salisbury, Spencer, Blunt, and Kem:
The manner of their taking may appeare
At large discoursed in this paper here.

Bul. We thanke thee gentle Percy for thy paines,
And to thy worth will adde right worthy gaines.

Enter Fitz-water.

Fitz. My Lord, I have from Oxford sent to London,
The heads of Broccas, and Sir Bernet Seely,
Two of the dangerous consorted Traitors,
That fought at Oxford, thy dire overthrow.

Bul. Thy paines Fitz-water, shall not be forgot,
Right Noble is thy merit, well I wot.

Enter Percy, and Carlile.

Per. The grand conspirator, Abbot of Westminster.
VVith clog of conscience, and sowre melancholly,
Hath yeilded up his body to the graue,
But here is Carlile, living to abide
Thy Kingly doome, and sentence of his pride.

Bul. Carlile, this is your doome:
Chooße out some secret place, some reverend roome
More than thou hast, and with it joy thy selfe:
So as thou liv'st in peace, dye free from strife:

For though mine enemy thou hast ever beene,
High sparkes of honour in thee I have seene.

Enter Extow with a Coffin.

Extow. Great King, within this Coffin I present
Thy buried feare. Herein all breathlesse lies
The mightiest of thy greatest enemies
Richard of Burdeaux, by me hither brought.

Bal. Extow, I thanke thee not, for thou hast wrought
A deed of slaughter, with thy fatall hand.
Vpon my head, and all this famous Land.

Ex. From your owne mouth my Lord, did I this deed.

Bal. They love not poyson, that doe poyson need,
Nor doe I thee: though I did wish him dead,
I hate the murtherer, love him murthered.
The guilt of conscience take thou for thy labour,
But neyther my good word, nor Princely favour.
VVith Caine goe wander through the shade of night,
And never shew thy head by day, nor light.
Lords, I protest my soule is full of woe,
That blood should sprinkle me, and make me grow,
Come mourne with me, for that I doe lament,
And put on sullen blacke incontinent:
He make a voyage to the Holy-land.
To wash this blood off from my guilty hand
March sadly after, grace my mourning here,
In weeping after this untimely beere.
